Herbert Liable For $9 Million Loss

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Supreme Court today reversed lower court decisions and found former state Treasurer John Herbert, his assistant and their bonding companies personally liable for some $9 million in state losses, stemming from a six-year-old Statehouse loan scandal.

The court based its finding on state law barring the treasurer from exceeding a $50 million limit on investment in commercial paper.

The scandal involving state loans to companies which eventually went bankrupt had severe implications for the state Republican party and swept a number of Democrats, including former Gov. John J. Gilligan, into office in 1970 elections.

Although the state treasurer is permitted to invest interim funds in commercial paper of private corporations, the court cited: "The common law standard of liability for loss of public funds by public officials where the investment is in violation of the maximum investment limitation embodied by the statute."

Testimony disclosed that Deputy Treasurer Robert Gardner exceeded the $50 million investment limit for a four-week period in 1970 in a loan to King Resources, a Denver, Colo. oil drilling firm that went bankrupt a year later. The loan was certified as delinquent in 1972, 20 months after Herbert, a Republican, left office.

Herbert's attorney argued before the court that the treasurer himself had been unaware that the maximum limit had been exceeded and blame "should not be laid at his doorstep."

An assistant to Atty. Gen. William J. Brown, who defeated Herbert in the 1970 election, said the former state official was personally liable because he substituted "his judgment for the legislature's" by going over the investment limit.

In a 6-2 decision on the last day of its term, the court cited a 1929 ruling which said:

"It has been the general policy, not only with government employees and appointees, but with state offices, county offices, township offices, and all other public officials to hold the public officials accountable for the monies that come into his hand..."

"When he comes to account for the money received," the majority wrote in 1929, "it must be accounted for and paid over unless payment by the official is prevented by an act of God or a public enemy."

Then, the majority added in its own words: "This rule may seem harsh, but it is based on legitimate policy reasons..."

King Resources defaulted on $8 million in loan principle and another $1 million in interest that accrued after Herbert and Gardner left public office. It is that $9 million that the state is seeking to recover.

Herbert, running for attorney general in 1970, lost to Democrat Brown, the present officeholder.

One of the two dissenting justices, J.J.P. Corrigan, called the ruling "astonishing" and claimed it represented "a grave denial of fairness and of due process to these two former officials and their sureties."

The other dissenter, Leonard J. Stern, said the common law standard cited by the majority was inappropriate.

Corrigan and Stern, both Republicans, were defeated in the general election. They will be replaced by Democrats who will hold a majority on the court beginning next week.

Job Services Offers Handicapped Program

The Ohio Bureau of Employment Services and the Job Service of Ohio, in cooperation with Governor James A. Rhodes, are announcing the start of a new program for handicapped persons called Project Employ.

Larry Stant is the Handicapped Representative for a tri-county area, which includes Pickaway, Fayette, and Clinton Counties. Stant is a Pickaway County native and a 1968 graduate of Logan Elm High School.

He is married to the former Judy Snook, and the couple are the parents of a four-year-old son, Christopher. The family resides at 1995 Ottawa Drive.

Stant stated that his job is to stay in touch with prospective employers and to try to place handicapped persons in a job market in which they are qualified.

No appointment is necessary for initial application in the program. Interested persons can go to the Job Service of Ohio office, located at 1211 North Court Street behind the Family Outdoor Center.

Office hours are from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Weather

Variable cloudiness, cold with snow likely today, tonight and decreasing Friday. Temperatures today and Friday will be in the low teens with tonight's low between zero and five degrees below. Chances of precipitation, 80 per cent today, 40 per cent tonight and 20 per cent Friday. Wednesday's high was 16 with a low during the night of three.

Chinese Troops Thwart Outbreak

HONG KONG (AP) — Chinese troops have put an end to "great chaos" spread by supporters of the purged widow of Mao Tse-tung in the city of Baoding, about 100 miles southwest of Peking, according to official and foreign news reports from China.

The reports, which spoke of bombings and armed raids by the rebels, did not make clear when the antigovernment disturbances occurred.

A Dec. 20 issue of Peking's People's Daily newspaper obtained here said the armed bands in Baoding had been "threatening the security of Peking so that they could usurp the party power" and were suppressed by army troops.

A Hopeh provincial radio report quoted by the London Daily Telegraph today said it took a "concerted effort" by the army to restore order after a long period of "confusion" in the city, the provincial capital. The Sydney (Australia) Morning Herald's China correspondent also reported the Baoding disturbances.

The Telegraph's Peking correspondent, Nigel Wade, noted that foreign travelers had reported as early as last spring that radical opponents of the Hopeh provincial leadership in Baoding had broken into an armory, blown up factories and committed murder, rape and robbery.

The Baoding disclosures were the latest in a series of reports of disturbances directed against the regime of Chairman Hua Kuo-feng and said to have been fomented by radical followers of Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and her associates in the "Gang of Four."

The disorders are believed to have been most widespread in late summer and fall.

The Sydney Morning Herald's Yvonne Preston wrote in a dispatch from Peking today, "Reports reaching Peking say that armed groups supporting the ousted 'Gang of Four' and opposing Hua robbed banks, raided ammunition factories, grain stores and shops, hijacked military vehicles and blew up factories in the city."

The reports said the rebels sabotaged communications and rail lines, raped women and hid caches of arms and ammunition, she wrote.

The army was ordered to shut down "gang" bases in Baoding, the capital of Peking's surrounding Hopeh Province, the report said. It said the government ordered the rebels to disband and hand over their weapons and ammunition or face "severe punishment."

Baoding, also known in the West as Paoting, is an important railway and textile center. The Morning Herald's report said the troubles there posed a security threat to Peking, but it did not elaborate.

The story said 12 of China's 29 provinces have experienced similar outbreaks of anti-Hua violence in recent months.

Chiang Ching and her three radical colleagues — Chang Chun-chiao, Wang Hung-wen and Yao Wen-yuan, all members of the Communist party's Politburo — were arrested Oct. 7, a month after Mao died. They have been accused of plotting a coup to prevent Hua from succeeding Mao.

Carter Sets Ethics Rules

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Carter says he is not ready to announce what he will do with his own extensive financial interests while in the White House. But he promises to abide by the same restrictions he plans to place on his top appointees.

Carter commented on his financial holdings and on a conflict-of-interest code Wednesday shortly before he returned to his home here after holding preinaugural cabinet meetings.

Aides said the code of ethics for all those Carter names to high positions would be made public late today or Friday.

For three days, the President-elect held marathon meetings with his prospective cabinet members and other key advisers on St. Simons Island, a secluded resort off the Georgia coast.

The economy and the direction the new administration will take after the Jan. 20 inauguration were high on the agenda.

Carter told a Dec. 20 news conference he already had approved of the code of ethics and that Press Secretary Jody Powell would make it available for publication. For reasons never fully explained, release of the document was delayed.

Carter said Wednesday that all his appointees to date have agreed to meet the terms of the code, and he said:

"It will require the complete divestiture of any financial relationships that might create a conflict of interest, and a complete revelation of all other economic holdings, including net worth statements."

And the President-elect added, "I'll conform with the same restrictions I've placed on the cabinet members."

Carter reported during his campaign that his net worth at the end of 1975 was $811,982.09.

Although Carter's partnership in the family peanut business does not have direct financial dealings with the government, it benefits from some agricultural subsidies. In advance of an announcement of Carter's plans for his personal holdings it was not clear whether the President-elect sees a potential conflict here or, if so, how he plans to deal with it.

Carter had no announced schedule for today.

Apart from disclosure of the ethics code, the only promised announcements during the next week involve a run-down on appointments to the top White House staff positions and the disclosure of Carter's long-anticipated plan to help stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment.

Carter said Wednesday he will meet here next Thursday with his economic team, which will be joined for further discussion on the following day by appropriate leaders of Congress.

A day earlier, Carter had promised to make public by the end of next week the broad outlines of his economic package, including a range of probable costs that might move up or down depending on the economy's course between then and the time Congress came to act upon it.

Gas Cutback More Severe

A further reduction in the amount of natural gas available from its supplier and continued cold temperatures will force Columbia Gas of Ohio to curtail its large volume customers more severely than previously anticipated.

Columbia Gas of Ohio is notifying some 1,100 large volume industrial users and 1,300 commercial customers that, in compliance with priorities established by the Ohio Public Utilities Commission, the following curtailment will be imposed on loads of a million or more cubic feet of gas a month beginning Jan. 1.

They are: 100 per cent of all industrial boiler loads; 100 per cent of all industrial loads that can use an alternate fuel; 50 per cent of all industrial loads that cannot use an alternate fuel; and 50 per cent of all large commercial loads, including schools.

These levels of curtailment will supersede those announced by the company Dec. 16.

In a related action, Columbia Gas announced it is developing a plan that will be filed soon with the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio that, if approved, would extend curtailment to thousands of other industrial and commercial customers throughout Ohio.

Details of the plan are not complete at this time.

Marvin E. White, Columbus, chairman of the board of Columbia Gas of Ohio, said the filing will be made in compliance with provisions of the PUCO order, issued Oct. 31, which established curtailment priorities for Ohio gas users.

The revised curtailment levels announced today became necessary after the company's principal supplier, the Columbia Gas Transmission Corp., notified Columbia Gas of Ohio and 85 other companies it serves in seven states that it would increase its curtailment levels for the remainder of the winter period.

White said one factor affecting the Transmission Corporation's available flowing gas supply was a two or three month delay by the Federal Power Commission in approving construction of a new pipeline in the Gulf of Mexico that would have permitted the Transmission Corp. to bring substantial quantities of natural gas to market.

"The Transmission Corp. planned to have this source of supply on line by November 1," White said. "Instead it is only now being connected to our System, as a result of recent bad weather in the Gulf of Mexico."

"As a result of the additional cutback from the Transmission Corp. and continued sub-normal temperatures during December, Columbia Gas of Ohio will have about 8 billion cubic feet less gas available for the remainder of the winter than was anticipated just two weeks ago," White said. "If we are to have sufficient gas to take care of home heating and other human needs, we must reduce deliveries to industrial and commercial customers."

He said Columbia companies in other states also were announcing more severe curtailment levels.

White said changes in curtailment Columbia Gas of Ohio announced Dec. 16 to be effective Jan. 1 had been based solely on the effect the recent cold weather had had on its supply. The weather, which has been averaging 40 per cent colder than last year and almost 31 per cent colder than normal in Ohio, has shown no signs of easing and customers are continuing to use more gas than normal.

In announcing the heavier curtailment, Columbia once again urged residential and small commercial users not affected by curtailment to increase energy conservation efforts.

While the curtailment changes announced today are scheduled to be in effect through March 31, the gas company warned customers that the gas supply picture would remain under constant review and that any significant changes in temperature, customer conservation or the amount of gas available from suppliers could result in additional changes in curtailment.

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn. (AP) — At the close of a year, a time for reflection, hardly a place is better suited than this for that worthy exercise.

There is something to be learned from this place, something other than what everybody already knows from the nightly weather report: that it is the coldest place in the 48 contiguous states.

When winter's fangs bite into this little spot on the Canadian border — in the first half of this month the thermometer managed to hang above zero for only four brief hours — living becomes an adventure and humility a daily lesson. Nature's elemental severity invites long thoughts about man's standing in the Great Scheme. "I think we worry more about the simple necessities of survival than most people do," said Frank Bohman, a philosophic aviator who has lived here all his 52 years.

"Having enough food in the house, enough fuel, a backup heating system, these are real concerns. I would imagine that in gentler climates people take survival for granted."

For the record, when the earth tilts toward winter, winds borne on the jet stream sweep from the North Pole down the interior flank of the Canadian Rockies and pivot eastward right at this point, so that the average yearly temperature here is 37.5 degrees and the annual snowfall 50 inches. Readings in the minus 30s and 40s are commonplace during the winter.

The cold grips so fiercely, in fact, that it all but refuses to let go. The ground freezes five feet down, untillable until June.

The town is on the granite shore of Rainy Lake, one of creation's masterpieces, a 340-square-mile work of art done in a freeform of coves and bays and flecked with 1,600 tiny granite islands timbered with pine.

Thus in the summertime the area is awash with tourists, regulars who return to their summer places on the islands, weekenders seeking walleyed pike and clean air, visitors with cameras, water skis and time to make the two-hour drive up from Duluth.

When the summer crop of frolickers is harvested, however, only a bold band of the hearty remain to face the long dark winter.

That yearly experience has given them a palpable sense of neighborliness, a closeness such as a shared secret brings. When the ice breaks up each May they have earned a communal handshake that says nice going everybody, we did it again, we didn't quit.

Those brave souls number 9,109 in International Falls and the nearby communities of South International Falls and Ranier. About the same number live across the Rainy River Bridge at Fort Frances, Canada.

The spirit of hands-across-the-sea, or in this case, the river, comes naturally; nature's legacy knows no international boundary. Indeed, one longtime Chamber of Commerce president in International Falls, Gordy McBride, was a Canadian citizen.

Markets

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market was mixed today, facing more of the profit taking that set in on Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gave up about a point in the early going. Gainers slightly outnumbered losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers reported a continuing mood of optimism over recent signs that the economy was strengthening after several sluggish months.

But the market still was plagued by doubts about the Dow's ability to make a clean break through the 1,000 level.

Pittston slipped 1/4 to 36 in active trading. The company said U.S. Steel had decided not to buy metallurgical coal from it next year but to go to the open market instead.

U.S. Steel shares eased 1/4 to 49.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average lost 5.15 to 994.93.

Losers just slightly outnumbered gainers among NYSE-listed issues, and the exchange's composite index dropped .19 to 57.28.

Big Board volume tailed off to 21.91 million shares.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .27 at 107.82.

Soviet Satellite Interceptor Test Believed Failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians have staged their fourth test of a satellite interceptor this year, but it tentatively is being classified as a failure by U.S. intelligence sources.

The Russians resumed flight testing of antisatellite devices early this year after a lapse of about five years and the U.S. sources said the latest test was conducted Monday.

All tests have involved only Russian satellites and no effort has been made by the Soviets to disable, destroy or interfere with U.S. spy-in-the-sky vehicles, U.S. intelligence sources said.

Officials who closely track the Soviet antisatellite development program have dismissed as untrue recent published reports that said the Russians have used high intensity laser beams or other devices against American satellites.

In Monday's test, sources say, Soviet Cosmos satellite 886 was launched from Tyuratam in central Russia on Dec. 27 and on its second orbit around the earth it apparently attempted to intercept Cosmos 880. Cosmos 880 was launched Dec. 9 and originally was thought to be a photo reconnaissance vehicle.

The hunter satellite never came closer than one mile to its target satellite, sources said, and the vehicle disintegrated on its third orbit. Cosmos 880, the target, is said to be still in space.

U.S. analysts tentatively rate the new test as a failure because the hunter satellite did not get closer to the target. In past tests, intelligence sources have said, the Soviet hunter satellite came within 100 feet of its target.

It is believed the Soviet system under development involves blowing up the hunter satellite in close proximity to its target, which would be destroyed by pieces of the exploding hunter vehicle.

This week's test was reported to be the first conducted by the Russians since July. A mid-December simultaneous launch of two Soviet Cosmos satellites at first was thought to have been such a test. But analysts subsequently decided it actually was an experiment connected with Russian manned space work.

Swine Flu Program Remains Suspended

ATLANTA (AP) — With the nation's swine flu inoculation program suspended for at least another few weeks, some experts are predicting that there will be no need to resume it at all this winter.

The federal Center for Disease Control ordered Wednesday that the moratorium begun Dec. 16 be extended until the strange paralytic disease called Guillain-Barre Syndrome can be studied more closely to determine whether it is linked to the vaccinations.

Several experts who met at the CDC here said the program probably would be reinstated only if signs of a flu epidemic appeared. They said there appears to be no threat of widespread swine flu or A-Victoria flu, last winter's major influenza.

"There is very little influenza anywhere in the world at the moment," said Dr. David J. Sencer, director of the CDC. "We hope that it stays that way."

Study Eyes Black Leaders In State

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The identification of black community leaders is the focus of a study designed to help public broadcasters identify significant problems of the black community.

The study, by Dr. Thomas A. McCain, assistant professor of communication, and Dr. C. Richard Hofstetter, former OSU professor of political science, was funded by a $9,000 grant from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting in Washington, D.C.

The researchers polled 780 members of the Columbus black community to examine methods public television stations might use to identify community leaders and problems of the black community.

"A problem facing broadcasters has been the identification of black community leaders who could accurately translate their community's problems," McCain said.

"Different community leaders have different viewpoints on problems and how to solve them. Also, the leaders' views often differ from those of the people who have the problems," he said.

McCain said that public service is at the heart of policy for all public agencies, therefore public television stations must produce programming of significance within their communities.

"This is particularly a problem for stations which serve black audiences because blacks generally don't watch public television, and it may be that the programs aren't relevant to their needs," McCain said.

"My hope is that the study will enable public broadcasters to better ascertain the needs of the community by approaching leaders they would otherwise miss," he said.

McCain said the agency plans to distribute results to some 250 public television stations throughout the nation early next year.

Deputies Lend Out-Of-County Assistance

Pickaway County Sheriff's Deputies lent assistance to neighboring law enforcement agencies Wednesday afternoon, according to reports at the Sheriff's Department.

Deputy Sheriff Jim Dixon was the first officer to arrive on the scene of a one-car accident 2:54 p.m. on Route 207, three-fourths of a mile north of Cook-Yankee Road in Fayette County.

A car struck a guardrail on the east side of the road, and impact forced the guardrail to penetrate through the driver's door and out the rear of the vehicle.

Deputy Dixon applied first aid to 14-year-old Carl E. Bobst, East Monroe, passenger in the car, who was pinned by the wreckage.

The youth, whose foot was partially amputated, was freed from the car on the arrival of Fayette County Sheriff's Deputies. He was admitted to Fayette Memorial Hospital, Washington C.H.

Deputy R. L. Phillips also assisted at the scene of the crash.

Three county Sheriff's Deputies, Detective Don Thompson, and Bill Dountz and J. Phillip Brown, responded to a call for assistance from Adelphi Marshall John Karshner 3:10 p.m.

Original reports that a man had barricaded himself inside his house and was threatening the Marshall with a weapon were apparently unfounded according to the report. Investigation of the incident was turned over to Ross County Deputy Sheriff Ron Nicholas.

The incident was not without consequence for the local officers, who responded to Adelphi on an emergency basis.

A tire on Deputy Dountz' cruiser developed a malfunction and had to be replaced, and Detective Thompson's car, which was parked on a icy incline, slid into a ditch.

Judge Ammer To Schedule Trial Dates

Hearing dates will be scheduled at a later date by Pickaway County Common Pleas Court Judge William Ammer on three cases.

Robert Welvin, found guilty by Judge Ammer of violating terms of his probation, was remanded to custody by the judge pending a further hearing to determine a sentence.

The 20-year-old Welvin of Route 4, Circleville, was given probation for three years in 1975 after he was found guilty of breaking and entering and grand theft.

Danny Allen Counts, 26, 2555 Cedar Hill Road, Canal Winchester, was also charged with violation of probation imposed in 1975.

Counts requested a court-appointed attorney and Judge Ammer ordered that he be remanded to custody until the case could be continued.

Counts was charged in 1975 with two counts of breaking and entering and two counts of grand theft. After pleading guilty, he was given probation for three years.

The trial date of DeJohn Workman, Columbus, will be set later, according to Judge Ammer, after Workman pled not guilty to a charge of passing a bad check.

Bond was set at $10,000. Workman was indicted on the charge in 1974 by the Grand Jury. However, he was not located until last week when he was picked up for a traffic offense. A computer check at that time revealed he was wanted in Pickaway County.

Another charge of breaking and entering and grand theft has been filed against Workman in Municipal Court.

The charges stem from the theft of a tractor from a farm in the southeastern part of the county.

Markets

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market was mixed today, facing more of the profit taking that set in on Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gave up about a point in the early going. Gainers slightly outnumbered losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers reported a continuing mood of optimism over recent signs that the economy was strengthening after several sluggish months.

But the market still was plagued by doubts about the Dow's ability to make a clean break through the 1,000 level. Pittston slipped 1/4 to 36 in active trading. The company said U.S. Steel had decided not to buy metallurgical coal from it next year but to go to the open market instead.

U.S. Steel shares eased 1/4 to 49.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average lost 5.15 to 994.93.

Losers just slightly outnumbered gainers among NYSE-listed issues, and the exchange's composite index dropped .19 to 57.28.

Big Board volume tailed off to 21.91 million shares.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .27 at 107.82.

Soviet Satellite Interceptor Test Believed Failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians have staged their fourth test of a satellite interceptor this year, but it tentatively is being classified as a failure by U.S. intelligence sources. The Russians resumed flight testing of antisatellite devices early this year after a lapse of about five years and the U.S. sources said the latest test was conducted Monday.

All tests have involved only Russian satellites and no effort has been made by the Soviets to disable, destroy or interfere with U.S. spy-in-the-sky vehicles, U.S. intelligence sources said. Officials who closely track the Soviet antisatellite development program have dismissed as untrue recent published reports that said the Russians have used high intensity laser beams or other devices against American satellites.

In Monday's test, sources say, Soviet Cosmos satellite 886 was launched from Tyuratam in central Russia on Dec. 27 and on its second orbit around the earth it apparently attempted to intercept Cosmos 880. Cosmos 880 was launched Dec. 9 and originally was thought to be a photo reconnaissance vehicle.

The hunter satellite never came closer than one mile to its target satellite, sources said, and the vehicle disintegrated on its third orbit. Cosmos 880, the target, is said to be still in space.

U.S. analysts tentatively rate the new test as a failure because the hunter satellite did not get closer to the target. In past tests, intelligence sources have said, the Soviet hunter satellite came within 100 feet of its target.

It is believed the Soviet system under development involves blowing up the hunter satellite in close proximity to its target, which would be destroyed by pieces of the exploding hunter vehicle.

This week's test was reported to be the first conducted by the Russians since July. A mid-December simultaneous launch of two Soviet Cosmos satellites at first was thought to have been such a test. But analysts subsequently decided it actually was an experiment connected with Russian manned space work.

Swine Flu Program Remains Suspended

ATLANTA (AP) — With the nation's swine flu inoculation program suspended for at least another few weeks, some experts are predicting that there will be no need to resume it at this winter.

The federal Center for Disease Control ordered Wednesday that the moratorium begun Dec. 16 be extended until the strange paralytic disease called Guillain-Barre Syndrome can be studied more closely to determine whether it is linked to the vaccinations. Several experts who met at the CDC here said the program probably would be reinstated only if signs of a flu epidemic appeared. They said there appears to be no threat of widespread swine flu or A-Victoria flu, last winter's major influenza.

"There is very little influenza anywhere in the world at the moment," said Dr. David J. Sencer, director of the CDC. "We hope that it stays that way."

Study Eyes Black Leaders In State

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The identification of black community leaders is the focus of a study designed to help public broadcasters identify significant problems of the black community.

The study, by Dr. Thomas A. McCain, assistant professor of communication, and Dr. C. Richard Hofstetter, former OSU professor of political science, was funded by a $9,000 grant from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting in Washington, D.C.

The researchers polled 780 members of the Columbus black community to examine methods public television stations might use to identify community leaders and problems of the black community.

"A problem facing broadcasters has been the identification of black community leaders who could accurately translate their community's problems," McCain said.

"Different community leaders have different viewpoints on problems and how to solve them. Also, the leaders' views often differ from those of the people who have the problems," he said.

McCain said that public service is at the heart of policy for all public agencies, therefore public television stations must produce programming of significance within their communities.

"This is particularly a problem for stations which serve black audiences because blacks generally don't watch public television, and it may be that the programs aren't relevant to their needs," McCain said.

"My hope is that the study will enable public broadcasters to better ascertain the needs of the community by approaching leaders they would otherwise miss," he said.

McCain said the agency plans to distribute results to some 250 public television stations throughout the nation early next year.

After the CDC announcement, Maryland's health secretary said in Baltimore that his state had "permanently discontinued" its swine flu vaccination program. Dr. Neil Solomon said he made the decision after officials in Atlanta told him the chance of a swine flu outbreak this year were "zilch, next to no possibility."

Only two cases of swine flu have been confirmed in the United States since the inoculation program began Oct. 1, both Wisconsin men engaged in farm work. A suspected case in Missouri was not confirmed.

At a news conference after the experts announced their recommendation, several said there was a scarcity of information about the rare syndrome, which they said has never before been closely monitored. They said they still could not be certain whether there was any connection between it and swine flu shots.

Since the inoculations began, 19 persons have died from Guillain-Barre. Of those, 11 had been inoculated against swine flu. In all, 496 people have suffered from Guillain-Barre since Oct. 1, including 242 who had received swine flu vaccinations, four who had received shots for Hong Kong flu, 234 who had not been immunized and 16 whose vaccination history was unknown.

Dr. Lawrence Schonberger of the CDC said that about 90 per cent of those who contract Guillain-Barre recover completely, about 5 per cent retain some degree of paralysis, and about 5 per cent die.

Conference Set On Rural Justice

ST. MARTIN, Ohio (AP) — A conference on rural justice and rural development issues in the Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana region is set for Jan. 28-30 at Chardfield College here.

Rural people from the region will discuss the problems they face at the economic and social level, and explore alternative strategies for rural development and revitalization.

Keynote speaker is Jim McHale, former secretary of agriculture for Pennsylvania and now with the Pennsylvania governor's office.

Hearing dates will be scheduled at a later date by Pickaway County Common Pleas Court Judge William Ammer on three cases.

Robert Welvin, found guilty by Judge Ammer of violating terms of his probation, was remanded to custody by the judge pending a further hearing to determine a sentence.

The 20-year-old Welvin of Route 4, Circleville, was given probation for three years in 1975 after he was found guilty of breaking and entering and grand theft.

Danny Allen Counts, 20, 2555 Cedar Hill Road, Canal Winchester, was also charged with violation of probation imposed in 1975.

Counts requested a court-appointed attorney and Judge Ammer ordered that he be remanded to custody until the case could be continued.

Counts was charged in 1975 with two counts of breaking and entering and two counts of grand theft. After pleading guilty, he was given probation for three years.

The trial date of DeJohn Workman, Columbus, will be set later, according to Judge Ammer, after Workman pled not guilty to a charge of passing a bad check.

Bond was set at $10,000.

Workman was indicted on the charge in 1974 by the Grand Jury. However, he was not located until last week when he was picked up for a traffic offense. A computer check at that time revealed he was wanted in Pickaway County.

Another charge of breaking and entering and grand theft has been filed against Workman in Municipal Court.

The charges stem from the theft of a tractor from a farm in the southeastern part of the county.

Many Sore Spots Plague U.S.-Canada Outlook

by PETER ARNETT

AP Special Correspondent

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — Impatiently striving for a distinctive North American personality, the Canadian government is running up against some important U.S. interests, and there is a rising backlash of concern in Canada and in the United States.

The once-cosy "special relationship" enjoyed by the continental neighbors has been shaken by what U.S. officials characterize as the "singleminded" pursuit of Canadian economic and cultural nationalism at the expense of her southern neighbor. "They've said for years that the U.S. threatens Canadian cultural and economic nationalism, but we're more on the short end of the stick now," said one U.S. official, detailing the areas of conflict.

Canadians claim that the United States started the downslide in relations in the early 1970s with unfair economic surcharges.

Relations between the federal government in Ottawa and Washington are sour in several major areas. From the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific, and up to the Arctic Sea, both countries are embroiled in border disputes ranging from the important to the trivial.

The political differences are allayed by close personal and business relationships between millions of Americans and Canadians.

These major issues trouble the two countries today:

—Anti-Americanism remains strong, particularly in Ottawa, the federal capital and the industrial center of Toronto. However, leaders and ordinary Canadians in the Maritime provinces and to the West see Americans as much less of a threat, and some charge that Ottawa is conducting "smear campaign."

—Uncertainty toward the federal government's attitude to foreign investment has almost dried up the flow of American money, and increased the flow of Canadian money into the United States.

—Gas prices and policies, and protectionist bills, have concerned the U.S. government and Congress.

—The Canadian government is continuing to pursue a "third option" aimed at putting some distance between the Canada and American economy by developing markets abroad. It has had little success so far.

—Both countries have made headway on some long-standing border issues including fishing rights, but a dozen others remain unsolved and potentially inflammable.

"The United States enters into our every conversation; it takes up all our time," said a government political scientist in Ottawa. It is from Ottawa that the belief flows that Canada is strong enough to take the necessary measures to reduce its dependence on America.

That belief is reinforced in Toronto, not only by the English Canadian intellectual elite, but also by the vast industrial and economic strength that southern Ontario has amassed.

U.S. companies control 58 per cent of Canada's oil and natural gas industry, 45 per cent of manufacturing, 43 per cent of mining and smelting and 36 per cent of the pulp and paper industry. This amounts to 40 of the largest 100 companies in Canada.

While this angers Ottawa and Toronto, the feeling seems to diminish the further one moves away. Out West in Vancouver, an aide of British Columbia Premier Bill Bennett declared, "The federal government has unnecessarily exacerbated distrust of the U.S. We have no hangups about America."

Canada's 10 provinces are loosely linked in a 110-year-old confederation to the federal government in Ottawa. Each province has its own parliamentary-style government, headed by a premier, with far greater autonomy than a U.S. state.

Canada's economic nationalism began biting with a series of policies including the Foreign Investment Review Act that restricts foreign companies in establishing or expanding operations. Concerned about possible discrimination against American firms, U.S. Ambassador Thomas Enders told a Toronto audience that the United States' need for energy capital "is so compelling that we would be reluctant to see a large-scale inflow of U.S. investment in this sector without being confident that Canada would not subsequently change the rules to disadvantage U.S. investors."

Another U.S. official commented, "There is a growing awareness in the U.S. that Canada is fat, rich and happy. A lot of that is because of U.S. risk capital. Once everything is developed up here Canadians ask 'So why is this America?' It's American because we developed it." Canada will need an estimated $90 billion in foreign capital in the next 15 years.

The federal government's protective economic policies are having an unexpected backlash, driving Canadian money to the United States where it can be located freely without controls.

The United States is digging in its heels on some issues, bluntly informing Canada that the American consumers of around one trillion cubic feet of Canadian gas each year expect the same treatment as Canadian consumers, even if there are shortfalls. U.S. senators have threatened to retaliate against a bill that attempts to stop the flow of Canadian dollars to American border TV stations. The same bill forced Time magazine's Canadian edition out of business by placing restrictions on Canadian advertisements in the publication.

Border conflicts with Canada go from coast to coast. Canada is still unwilling to accept the American view that the Northwest Passage through the Arctic Islands is an international waterway, but has embarked on what one American observer called "creeping sovereignty" to claim the passage.

Both countries have strong feelings about fishing grounds in the Gulf of Maine that will be in dispute because of the 200-mile fishing zone. The United States wants total control of the Georges Bank.

Five dam and river projects have raised tempers across the mainland border, two potentially harming Canadian ecology and farmland, three possibly hurting the United States.

They are Washington's Ross Dam project, the Garrison water diversion in North Dakota, and smaller projects bordering New York, British Columbia and Saskatchewan.

AT BOOKS IN THE CHILDREN'S LIBRARY

Now that Santa has come and gone, the only things most of us need to put on a list are our New Year's resolutions. When you compile yours, make visiting your public library a top priority. If you aren't already one of our frequent visitors, you'll probably discover some pleasant surprises!

Patrons of the children's room may want to begin the year with one of our brand new books. Start with some soothing night reading on New Year's Eve. "My Bedtime Story Book of Two-Minute Stories" contains 58 illustrated shorties covering a wide spectrum of subjects. Perfect for those nights when Junior is persistent, but parents are busy!

Another prospective evening favorite is "The Sleepy Time Treasury," a compilation of 26 traditional and contemporary poems dealing with sleep and night. (821).

Fun and learning go hand in hand for small adventurers with "Can You Walk the Plank?" The simple text is written by a public school reading specialist and accompanies full page color photographs of young school children. The book explores basic movement skills through such fantasy experiences as walking the plank (balance beam), playing clown (turning a somersault), or being a boxer (jumping rope).

For novice readers, we have two new "Blue Bug" books: "Blue Bug's Treasure" and "Blue Bug to the Rescue." The former illustrates opposite concepts, such as thick and thin. In the latter, the reader learns to identify a spider and ten different insects as well as eleven common poisonous plants (from which Blue Bug saves his friends). One word per page spread, and that's in large print!

For those seeking more text, look in our "Easy-Reader" shelf for "Meat Pies and Sausages," a fun modern fable about a fox who easily outwits a wolf three times in a row.

While you're watching the Bowl games this weekend, keep our latest sports biography handy for your half-time entertainment. "Franco Harris" is the easy-to-read true story of the fullback who helped turn the Pittsburgh Steelers into Super Bowl champions. Grades 3+

New fiction titles for middle grade students include "Mat's Mitt," an amusing story about a magical baseball glove and its effect on its owner's life.

"America's Most Haunted Places" contains fifteen ghost stories associated with historic sites in the United States. Do you believe John Brown pays an annual visit to Harper's Ferry? Or that George Washington appeared at the Battle of Gettysburg? Read this book; then decide for yourself.

Come in tonight and choose a good book to start your year with. The library staff hopes everyone has a prosperous and educational year!

Nature's Protectors

Millions of Americans flock to the parks maintained by the National Park Service every year without giving much thought to the tremendous work involved in protecting millions of acres of the most beautiful land in the world.

The rangers who work in these parks undoubtedly compose the largest army of conservationists in the world.

They preserve herds of buffalo, bighorn sheep and elk in Yellowstone Park, research the 140 million-year-old fossils in Dinosaur National Monument, study the life of the giant trees in Sequoia National Park so they can better protect them, and research rock samples and film violent action in Volcanoes National Park in Hawaii.

As if that were not enough, park personnel also have to manage increasing armies of visitors each year with the dual purpose of making the visit a memorable experience with as little strain on the park's natural environment as possible.

A Rule Of The Elbow

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK — Safety experts typically pray for the worst possible weather conditions on New Year's Eve, on the sound theory that people who know they'll be drinking hesitate to venture far by car when the driving will be excessively hazardous.

"Sleet and heavy snow — if they begin early enough in the day of Dec. 31st — can save lives," a National Safety Council spokesman said once, "That's because drinkers are remarkably sane, before they've had a couple of drinks. The realize as well as anyone that they can't handle liquor and dangerous roads at the same time."

When bad weather erupts during the festivities of New Year's Eve, however, dire statistics inevitably soar. "The person who'd be scared out of his wits at the prospect of driving on icy roads when sober, will be wildly courageous after a few cocktails or highballs. Most people who regularly drive home from parties cling to the belief that they can handle anything — that, in fact, they are better and more cautious drivers after drinking than they were before drinking.

This belief — "I can drive as well or better after drinking, because I know I must concentrate harder" — is a grave misconception.

According to a Milwaukee doctor, Herman A. Heise, experienced drinkers commonly conceive of their physical performance as being improved with alcohol, in instances where fear and (or) tension are factors.

To explain the drinker's thinking, and the contrasting reality, Dr. Heise gave this example:

To explain the drinker's thinking, and the contrasting reality, Dr. Heise gave this example:

"Place a six-inch board on the sidewalk and you can balance on it easily," he said. "Raise that board twenty stories in the air and fear would paralyze your actions, wouldn't it?"

"Given a few drinks of whisky, though, and you could proceed despite the danger. Your equilibrium, unfortunately, would follow your fears, causing a long fall . . ."

We all know people who seem to have "a hollow leg." They appear to be able to drink far more than the average social drinker without a slur in their speech or any other outward sign of drunkenness. But you don't build up that much of a tolerance to alcohol, you merely build up an ability to hide awkward evidence of a problem.

"The same amount of alcohol in the bloodstream makes the experienced drunk just as drunk as the novice drunk," claimed Dr. Heise. "He may not show the effects on the surface. But in an automobile, he's in equally sad shape."

A survey showed that a person with a blood alcohol concentration of 0.15 per cent (a level reached after five to eight drinks) doesn't really care what happens to him. His chances of having a traffic accident are ten times higher than when he is sober.

With a level of 0.05 per cent alcohol (the results of two or three drinks), his accident chances are double those of a sober man.

Dr. Heise described the drunken driver as a "psychological cripple."

"Picture this driver on the highway on New Year's Eve:

"He is wearing dark glasses, with an opaque side piece that blocks out his peripheral vision completely.

"He has forgotten that traffic signals exist, and he firmly believes the traffic laws were made only for idiots.

"He is an egotist, and thinks he can do better than the man in the car ahead. He has little or no judgment of distance or speech. His reflexes are slow. He can't concentrate."

This, in the doctor's opinion, is a composite picture of the inebriated driver. Frightening picture. It should scare the wits out of people who drink, then drive. But probably it won't.

If a person has had a few drinks and feels a touch of fear coming on, he'll just reach for another belt and alleviate that li'l old fear.

Remember a rule-of-elbow this New Year's Eve:

"One drink is acceptable. Two drinks are okay if you plan to stay on, eating for two hours. Three drinks or more, and you'd be wise to borrow a sofa or call a cab . . . if you have any wisdom left."

Business World

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Next month, in 1977, we finally will find what the monthly jobless rates were for 1976. Yes, the corrected, seasonally adjusted rates for all those figures that in the past year were the basis for so many headlines, so much concern, so many personal, business, political and governmental decisions.

They might not have been correct, you know. Little attention was brought to this possibility at the time, but the fact is that those fractional ups and downs that seemed so precisely accurate might not have been.

No matter; we made our decisions, and among them was the decision to change presidents. Whatever decisions were made cannot be recalled. But the numbers can, and they will be.

Each January, you see, the Bureau of Labor Statistics takes another look at the numbers and revises some of them. Last January, for instance, we lowered the 1975 jobless peak to 8.9 per cent from 9.2 per cent.

This may not seem to be very significant. It is, you might say, only three-tenths of 1 per cent. But do you recall how much was made of even smaller changes when the monthly figures were being announced?

Do you recall how, when unemployment jumped threethirds of 1 per cent from June to July, it was widely said to have damaged President Ford's election chances? That figure too might be revised — next month.

Why should they be revised? In this day of electronic calculators is it possible that errors in additions can be made? No, that's not the issue at all. The issue is that the announced figures never were counted at all.

The fact that all these numbers are formulations rather than actual counts is very little appreciated. When the jobless rate rises or falls it need not mean that more or fewer people are without jobs.

Instead, a formula is applied to the raw count and there emerges from the process a seasonally adjusted figure. It may be larger or smaller than the raw count, depending on the month involved.

The figure we use, therefore, is one arrived at in the statistical laboratory rather than on the unemployment line. You seldom hear about the raw count; for popular usage it is all but discarded.

The goal of these adjustments is to eliminate routine, seasonal changes. The purpose for so doing, it is said, is to reveal the persistent, underlying trend.

The total impact of this on the presidential election hasn't been calculated yet, and it probably cannot be. But there seems little doubt that the rising, seasonally adjusted jobless totals just before the election swayed many voters.

Could it be that a president was one of those seasonally adjusted out of a job? We can never know.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

For years I've been fighting the battle of hair on my upper lip. I've bleached and tweezed and tweezed and bleached. Now I hear that there are special X-ray treatments which can get rid of the problem once and for all. Where can I have this done?

Mrs. T. W., Calif.

Dear Mrs. W.:

Many people, in desperation, often shift from reliable forms of treatment to dangerous ones. The use of X-rays as a depilatory is particularly hazardous.

About 40 years ago, before the real dangers of such X-ray treatments were recognized, it was a common practice for relatively untrained technicians to use X-rays for this purpose. Unfortunately, it took almost 30 years before skin cancers of the face became apparent and were traced to those original X-ray treatments.

I urge you, and even warn you, not to expose yourself to a form of treatment that you may ultimately regret.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. B.:

Extra fingers, known as "super-numerary digits," are relatively common birth deformities.

Let me immediately assure you that if no other birth defects exist at the present time you need not live in constant fear that they will be present at a later time.

There are now specialists who are particularly interested in the surgery of the hands and feet. Operations are performed safely and successfully. Usually these operations are done at a very early age. The problem is thoroughly studied before the exact operation is chosen.

If muscles and tendons are involved these, too, respond well to the ingenious surgical techniques that now are available.

Your doctor can refer you to an orthopedic surgeon who has such special interests.

Find 'Child Abuse' Actually Rare Defect

MILWAUKEE (AP) — When their infant son fractured 10 bones, Michael and Barbara Schoenfield were accused of child abuse. They nearly lost custody before doctors traced the injuries to a rare birth defect which will probably kill the child before he is 2.

"There was a total lack of due process," Schoenfield said in an interview about the legal entanglements in which the couple found themselves. "A total lack of sensitivity."

Mrs. Schoenfield said that when she brought newborn Justin home from the hospital three months ago, she had a feeling the baby was not healthy.

"The doctors kept saying he was normal, but I could tell something was wrong," she said.

Soon the baby needed surgery for a double hernia. Then he began having seizures.

Doctors first thought it was epilepsy, but they later found 10 fractures which they said could only have been caused by abuse.

"They said we were shaking the child so hard that we broke his bones and that brought on the seizures," Mrs. Schoenfield said.

X rays showed none of the skull fractures that usually accompany such cases, but the Milwaukee County Welfare Department filed a court petition to remove the baby from the couple's custody because of alleged abuse.

The Schoenfields, both 28 and college graduates, insisted on their innocence, but a doctor suggested they get psychiatric help. They said they had to threaten court action to see Justin's medical records. A nurse said the parents showed only an "adequate" amount of concern for their baby. And a social worker told them they would probably be divorced soon.

They were finally cleared when a specialist determined that Justin was suffering from Menkes Kinky Hair, a rare metabolic birth defect which makes the bones extremely weak and brittle. Justin is expected to live another two months to two years.

"No one would listen to us or believe us and everyone was accusatory," Mrs. Schoenfield said. "We're upset about the way it was handled and we think our rights were violated."

"We have a switch from child abuse to parent abuse," said Angelo Greco, the couples' attorney, after the custody petition was dismissed in Children's Court.

"We don't want to sue anybody," Mrs. Schoenfield said, "but we do want to do something to make sure this does not happen again."

The couple said they have accepted the specialist's diagnosis, and realize the disease is terminal.

"We're very upset that our child is going to die, but we're happy to have him home again," Mrs. Schoenfield said. "He's a joy to have. We love him, and our relationship is stronger than ever."

Seek Probe Of Federal Grant System

HAMILTON, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Rep. Thomas N. Kindness, R-Ohio, and Butler County officials have called for an investigation of the way federal grants are awarded after having been turned down for millions of dollars worth of application requests.

The officials demanded a freeze on all federal public works grants in Ohio while the investigation is made.

Kindness and the Butler County Board of Commissioners, in a telegram to President Ford and area congressmen Tuesday, also asked for an investigation of the criteria used in selection of projects for public works by federal agencies.

"Preliminary analysis and the high unemployment rate in our area lead us to question if distribution is equitable and within the intent of the law," the telegram said.

"We will immediately furnish additional background material and data to substantiate our claim," said the telegram from Kindness and the commissioners.

Projects rejected by federal agencies Monday included: $1.9 million for modernization of the Butler County Courthouse; $124,911 for remodeling the jail and $691,325 for a jail addition. The Butler County Engineer's office had also submitted water and sewer applications. In addition, several applications for grants by the City of Hamilton were also rejected, the officials said.

Commission President Donald G. Schirmer said copies to the telegram were sent to President-elect Carter, U.S. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, the Secretary of Commerce, National Association of County Officials and James E. Peterson, regional director of the Economic Development Administration.

GI Insurance Dividend Increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veterans who kept their GI insurance will be paid higher dividends again in 1977, with the average World War II vet receiving a dividend of $104, the Veterans Administration says.

The VA said today that veterans of World War I, World War II and the Korean conflict will receive a record $403.4 million in insurance dividends next year. Vietnam era veterans receive no dividends.

VA Administrator Richard L. Roubush said the $403.4 million in payments will be an increase of $26.6 million over the dividend paid in 1976 and will mark the 10th year in a row that payments to World War I and World War II veterans have increased.

Korean war veterans began receiving dividends in 1975 and also have received dividend increases each year since.

Roubush said $368.1 million of the total dividend will go to 3.5 million World War II veterans who maintained their GI insurance policies. The payments will average $104 for those vets, an increase from the 1976 average payment of $95.

The average payment for the 114,300 surviving World War I policy-holders will increase from $183 this year to $202 next year. Their payments will total $23.1 million.

About 550,000 Korea veterans who kept their GI policies in force will receive $12.2 million in dividend payments, Roubush said. This is an average payment of $22, compared with $18 this year.

There are no dividends for Vietnam era veterans because government-sponsored policies for those vets expired shortly after their discharges unless they were converted to regular civilian policies.

Dividend payments to World War I, World War II and Korea veterans will be made on the anniversary dates of the individual policies. Roubush said the first checks will be mailed next week, that payments are made automatically and veterans do not need to apply for them.

Dividends represent a refund to policy-holders of cash not needed to pay the cost of the insurance. They include excess interest and any savings because fewer policy claims were paid than had been expected.

The VA said dividends on most VA insurance policies have increased in recent years because the funds have been earning higher interest.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

For years I've been fighting the battle of hair on my upper lip. I've bleached and tweezed and tweezed and bleached. Now I hear that there are special X-ray treatments which can get rid of the problem once and for all. Where can I have this done?

Mrs. T. W., Calif.

Dear Mrs. W.:

Many people, in desperation, often shift from reliable forms of treatment to dangerous ones. The use of X-rays as a depilatory is particularly hazardous.

About 40 years ago, before the real dangers of such X-ray treatments were recognized, it was a common practice for relatively untrained technicians to use X-rays for this purpose. Unfortunately, it took almost 30 years before skin cancers of the face became apparent and were traced to those original X-ray treatments.

I urge you, and even warn you, not to expose yourself to a form of treatment that you may ultimately regret.

Our baby was born with an extra finger on each hand. We're concerned, not only about this, but wonder if other birth defects will crop up at a later date.

Mr. and Mrs. G. B., Fla.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. B.:

Extra fingers, known as "super-numerary digits," are relatively common birth deformities.

Let me immediately assure you that if no other birth defects exist at the present time you need not live in constant fear that they will be present at a later time.

There are now specialists who are particularly interested in the surgery of the hands and feet. Operations are performed safely and successfully. Usually these operations are done at a very early age. The problem is thoroughly studied before the exact operation is chosen.

If muscles and tendons are involved these, too, respond well to the ingenious surgical techniques that now are available.

Your doctor can refer you to an orthopedic surgeon who has such special interests.

Find 'Child Abuse' Actually Rare Defect

MILWAUKEE (AP) — When their infant son fractured 10 bones, Michael and Barbara Schoenfield were accused of child abuse. They nearly lost custody before doctors traced the injuries to a rare birth defect which will probably kill the child before he is 2.

"There was a total lack of due process," Schoenfield said in an interview about the legal entanglements in which the couple found themselves. "A total lack of sensitivity."

Mrs. Schoenfield said that when she brought newborn Justin home from the hospital three months ago, she had a feeling the baby was not healthy.

"The doctors kept saying he was normal, but I could tell something was wrong," she said.

Soon the baby needed surgery for a double hernia. Then he began having seizures.

Doctors first thought it was epilepsy, but they later found 10 fractures which they said could only have been caused by abuse.

"They said we were shaking the child so hard that we broke his bones and that brought on the seizures," Mrs. Schoenfield said.

X rays showed none of the skull fractures that usually accompany such cases, but the Milwaukee County Welfare Department filed a court petition to remove the baby from the couple's custody because of alleged abuse.

The Schoenfields, both 28 and college graduates, insisted on their innocence, but a doctor suggested they get psychiatric help. They said they had to threaten court action to see Justin's medical records. A nurse said the parents showed only an "adequate" amount of concern for their baby. And a social worker told them they would probably be divorced soon.

They were finally cleared when a specialist determined that Justin was suffering from Menkes Kinky Hair, a rare metabolic birth defect which makes the bones extremely weak and brittle. Justin is expected to live another two months to two years.

"No one would listen to us or believe us and everyone was accusatory," Mrs. Schoenfield said. "We're upset about the way it was handled and we think our rights were violated."

"We have a switch from child abuse to parent abuse," said Angelo Greco, the couples' attorney, after the custody petition was dismissed in Children's Court.

"We don't want to sue anybody," Mrs. Schoenfield said, "but we do want to do something to make sure this doesn't not happen again."

The couple said they have accepted the specialist's diagnosis, and realize the disease is terminal.

"We're very upset that our child is going to die, but we're happy to have him home again," Mrs. Schoenfield said. "He's a joy to have. We love him, and our relationship is stronger than ever."

Seek Probe Of Federal Grant System

HAMILTON, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Rep. Thomas N. Kindness, R-Ohio, and Butler County officials have called for an investigation of the way federal grants are awarded after having been turned down for millions of dollars worth of application requests.

The officials demanded a freeze on all federal public works grants in Ohio while the investigation is made.

Kindness and the Butler County Board of Commissioners, in a telegram to President Ford and area congressmen Tuesday, also asked for an investigation of the criteria used in selection of projects for public works by federal agencies.

"Preliminary analysis and the high unemployment rate in our area lead us to question if distribution is equitable and within the intent of the law," the telegram said.

"We will immediately furnish additional background material and data to substantiate our claim," said the telegram from Kindness and the commissioners.

Projects rejected by federal agencies Monday included: $1.9 million for modernization of the Butler County Courthouse; $124,911 for remodeling the jail and $691,325 for a jail addition. The Butler County Engineer's office had also submitted water and sewer applications. In addition, several applications for grants by the City of Hamilton were also rejected, the officials said.

Commission President Donald G. Schirmer said copies of the telegram were sent to President-elect Carter, U.S. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, the Secretary of Commerce, National Association of County Officials and James E. Peterson, regional director of the Economic Development Administration.

Business World

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Next month, in 1977, we finally will find what the monthly jobless rates were for 1976.

Yes, the corrected, seasonally adjusted rates for all those figures that in the past year were the basis for so many headlines, so much concern, so many personal, business, political and governmental decisions.

They might not have been correct, you know. Little attention was brought to this possibility at the time, but the fact is that those fractional ups and downs that seemed so precisely accurate might not have been.

No matter; we made our decisions, and among them was the decision to change presidents. Whatever decisions were made cannot be recalled. But the numbers can, and they will be.

Each January, you see, the Bureau of Labor Statistics takes another look at the numbers and revises some of them. Last January, for instance, we lowered the 1975 jobless peak to 8.9 per cent from 9.2 per cent.

This may not seem to be very significant. It is, you might say, only three-tenths of 1 per cent. But do you recall how much was made of even smaller changes when the monthly figures were being announced?

Do you recall how, when unemployment jumped threetenths of 1 per cent from June to July, it was widely said to have damaged President Ford's election chances? That figure too might be revised — next month.

Why should they be revised? In this day of electronic calculators is it possible that errors in additions can be made? No, that's not the issue at all. The issue is that the announced figures never were counted at all.

The fact that all these numbers are formulations rather than actual counts is very little appreciated. When the jobless rate rises or falls it need not mean that more or fewer people are without jobs.

Instead, a formula is applied to the raw count and there emerges from the process a seasonally adjusted figure. It may be larger or smaller than the raw count, depending on the month involved.

The figure we use, therefore, is one arrived at in the statistical laboratory rather than on the unemployment line. You seldom hear about the raw count; for popular usage it is all but discarded.

The goal of these adjustments is to eliminate routine, seasonal changes. The purpose for so doing, it is said, is to reveal the persistent, underlying trend.

The total impact of this on the presidential election hasn't been calculated yet, and it probably cannot be. But there seems little doubt that the rising, seasonally adjusted jobless totals just before the election swayed many voters.

Could it be that a president was one of those seasonally adjusted out of a job? We can never know.

Williamsport News

By EILEEN EASTERDAY, Phone 986-3481

Taking a two weeks vacation just before Christmas is truly terrific but getting back into "harness" is one big groan! I have come to the conclusion that I am the type who could continuously be on vacation — too bad my pocketbook isn't in agreement.

We are happy to bring back the word that our adored Grandma Phoebe Smiley and Sweetpea Ruth Shipe of Macon, Geo. are fairly well. Grandma S. had taken a fall in her bedroom and was a bit shaken but seemed to be suffering no ill effects otherwise. She asked to be remembered to her many friends and at 102 years her mind still alertly recalls many incidents of her long years of residency in our town. What a joy it always is to visit with the two of them and yet how sad it is each time we depart not knowing when we will have the chance to be with them once again. Our visit in Macon was the Tuesday before Christmas and on our return to Ohio.

Prior to that time we had practically covered the entire state of Florida having been in St. Augustine, Daytona Beach, Disney World, Lake Wales, Clearwater Beach, Tampa, St. Petersburg Beach, Ft. Myers, Sarasota, Naples, The Everglades, Miami, Coral Gables, Miami Beach, Ft. Lauderdale, Hollywood, Palm Beach and West Palm Beach and on up the Atlantic to Vero Beach back across to Haines City, Orlando, Clermont and northward. We did most of the usual tourist attractions but daughter Becki and her friend Karla Frye enjoyed Miami Beach the most because all they had to do was step outside our motel door and there was the beach and the water and sunshine in the 80's.

Florida has not been privileged to enjoy the best of weather this season however it really outdid itself for us because we had super fantastic weather all but one day. Tourism has not been too good this year as was evident in our travels. We whizzed through Disney World with no crowd at all and it was A.O.K. not to have to stand and wait to enter the different attractions. Since I had the advantage of having been there before we really did cover the area in jig time.

Traveling with us for the first three days of our journey was neighbor Emma Puffinbarger. When we reached our lodgings at Disney World Emma left us to go be with her son Marion Steinhauer, his Gretchen and their family at Winter Haven.

While we were in Naples we visited briefly with a former teacher of mine from high school days, Edward Weston and his wife Thelma who have a winter home there. It had been several years but you know, he hardly seemed a day older. Surely wish I could have left them with that impression of me but alas! such is not the case. The years and a passion for good food have taken care of that.

Vacationing in Florida for the Christmas holiday were John and Shelia Jean "Tillie" Neff and their children, Barbara, Johnny and Nellie and David Thacker, and Tillie's mother Mrs. Viola Myers from our village. The Neff family spent time at Inverness, Fla. with Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Wood and family and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood while Mrs. Myers was the houseguest of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Clark of Davis Island, Tampa. Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Myers are friends of long standing with the friendship having begun when they were young girls growing up in Lawrence County. The Clarks and Mrs. Myers had Christmas dinner with Mr. and Mrs. David Thomas of East Davis Island.

During their Florida sojourn the Neffs also visited with Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Winner at Sarasota. The travelers returned to their respective

No Gold Rush In Philly Sewage

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There's gold in them thar sludge — and silver, platinum, copper, chromium, zinc and nickel. But they're apparently too expensive to be extracted from Philadelphia's sewage and garbage.

Dr. I.M. Levitt, chairman of the Mayor's Science and Technology Advisory Council, estimates one part per million of the city's wastes are heavy metals.

That means the Philadelphia sewage contains about two tons of gold, worth $7.5 million at current market prices. Levitt said other metals in the sludge probably are worth about $30 million.

But it would cost about $100 million to separate the metals, Levitt says, making the whole idea unworkable.

Carney To Head Energy Committee

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Rep. Thomas J. Carney, D-71 Boardman, who served as majority whip in the past legislative session, has been named chairman of the Energy and Environment Committee.

Carney's position as whip will be assumed by former energy chairman Tom Fries, D-35 Dayton. The appointments were announced Wednesday by House Speaker Vernal G. Riffe Jr.

Carney, a leader in shaping Democratic legislative energy policy, chaired a Joint Select Committee on Energy in 1975. Out of that panel's deliberations came legislation establishing a new "original cost" utility rate law.

homes early Tuesday morning. Mrs. Myers had toured the west with family members this summer so for 1976 she has chalked up somewhere in the neighborhood of 10,000 miles plus. Who says the old grey mare ain't what she used to be?

It was a family affair Christmas Day for dinner in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McCabe. The couple was pleased to have Bill and Juanita Gobel, Ann, Vicki, Todd and Robbie, Mike and Jettie Gordon and Jonathan all of Lancaster, Archie Neely from Columbus, John and Rose McCabe, JoAnn Rickabaugh of Ashville, Ida Fletcher, Bob and Jeannette McCabe, Karen and Roger, Mike and Janet McCabe all from Circleville.

Christmas noon guests in the Easterday household were Edna Newhouse, Mary Alice Greenwood and Mike McCain. In the afternoon Papa Bill and Amy visited with his mother Frances Easterday and other family members at her home in Chillicothe. On Christmas eve Marc and Debbie Easterday and Monica joined the Grove City Bailey family for a holiday gathering while Becki Easterday enjoyed being with the McCain family on Wintergreen Hill.

Making Christmas especially bright in our home this year is the return of our darling daughter Beth Sa de Souza from Recife, Brazil in South America. Many folks will recall that Beth lived with us for 6 months 2 years ago and she will be with us for three months this time. Beth arrived on Dec. 22 and we are all "tickled pink" to have her home again.

Arriving on the same plane with our Beth was her cousin Roelof de Sa also of Recife who will make his home with Ron and Marilyn Bush and boys Mike and Tim for the three months.

On hand Christmas eve for dinner, exchange of gifts and to welcome Roelof to the family fold were Pat and Diana Eycke and daughters Danielle and Kristi from Chillicothe, Doc and Bernice Dupler of Somerset, Williamsport Postmaster Bush and his Dorothy. Doc and Bernice visited from Monday before Christmas until the Monday following.

It was a full day of celebration on Christmas for Mary Alice Greenwood who spent time with us and then in the evening she was hostess to a family dinner with her guests being sons Don and Ron and their wives Sherry and Terry and her much loved granddaughters Lea and Lisa (the children of Don and Sherry). Infatigating Terry and Ron will add to the family circle by summer. Also present for the holiday dinner was Bob Waldren.

Mike and Marsha McCafferty and their pretty trio Kelly, Kim and Kathy along with John Delong of Grove City, Dan and Margene Hamner of Circleville, Jamey Looney, freshman home from Kent State were the Christmas evening dinner guests of Mike and Ruth McCafferty of Roundtown.

After 20 years of living in the same house Bob and Alice Cornwell are now unpacking all those years accumulation at their new abode at 11338 Crownover Rd. Until June their mailing address will remain Box 287, Williamsport, however.

News releases from the Share of the Square committee note that a full gear neighbor to neighbor contact will be made beginning in January. The committee is hopeful that everyone will be a willing part of this community project since it is only through the help of each and everyone that the purchase of the land for the future use of the community will be possible. The land is, of course, the former Williamsport school grounds that has been offered to the village and township for the sum of twenty thousand dollars. To date $2,070 has been donated and following is a list of the contributors:

Hazel Galloway, Deercreek Auto Parts, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Galloway, C. K. McFarland and Sons, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Galloway, John Cook T.V., Gil Conley, Mr. and Mrs. George Hamman, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Ater, Nell Ater, Wilma Jean Chew, Mrs. Walter Lewis and Beverly Lewis, Martha Tipton Hicks, Esta Tipton, Mr. and Mrs. John Drummond, Dorsey Bumgarner, Mary Alice Luellen Harness, The Dairy Shed, United Methodist Women, Mr. and Mrs. James Matthews, Sorosis Club, Gertrude Schleich, Evelyn Kaiser, Robert Schaeffer, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schein, Mr. William Huffman, Mark Schein, Circle D Recreation, Pat Clark, Angie List.

All too soon we will be saying Auld Lang Syne to 1976 and giving a big welcome to 1977. I can remember how exciting changing from one year to another was as a child but somehow the ringing out of the old and ringing in the new has lost a great deal of glamour as the years go by and golly ned! how quickly a year slips by these days. Oh, well, we still wish nothing but the very best always in all ways for each and everyone. Good health, peace, prosperity, happiness, love of mankind and God, may we all be so blessed.

Next week we shall discover whether our good folks follow the New Year's resolution tradition or not. Till then — take care.

PET OF THE WEEK — This male mixed breed puppy is eight-weeks-old. He is black and white with brown around his eyes. He is available at the Pickaway County Animal Shelter or by calling 474-3714 or 474-1283. Pickaway County Humane Society reminds you that puppies and kittens require a visit to the vet. They can then receive the needed shots to prevent disease and insure good health. Veterinary care is essential in good pet ownership.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bitter cold temperatures are gripping Ohio and are showing little sign of letting up before the weekend. From overnight lows in the single figures north to around 15 south, highs today were expected to climb only into the teens and low 20s.

An area of light snow associated with a weak low pressure area from Iowa to Lake Michigan brought increasing cloudiness to Ohio today and areas of light snow spread over the northwestern half of the state.

Most of Ohio were to receive some light snow today with amounts ranging from one to two inches or less.

The temperatures will continue very cold as some clearing occurs again tonight with lows of zero to five below likely throughout the state. The highs today and Friday will only be around 10 degrees north and near 20 along the Ohio River.

Some scattered flurries are likely to continue in the north through Friday.

Since August, temperatures have been below normal with some months far below the monthly normal. November was about eight degrees below normal, October six degrees and this month's average temperature will also average more than six degrees below the normal at Cleveland and will actually be colder than the monthly average for January.

Carter Inaugural To Be Visualized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter's inauguration will be immortalized by five top figures in American art — Andy Warhol, Jacob Lawrence, Roy Lichtenstein, Robert Rauschenberg and Jamie Wyeth.

The Presidential Inauguration Committee announced Tuesday that it has commissioned the five to record their impressions of the inauguration, and will raise funds for the event by selling 100 sets of their signed prints for $2,500 each.

Warhol, 46, lives in New York and was a leading figure in the pop art movement of the 1960s, when his works celebrated such familiar images as the Campbell's soup can. Lichtenstein, 53, of Southampton, N.Y., also figured prominently in that era, with dot pattern paintings.

Lawrence, 59, of Seattle, paints social and historical themes. Rauschenberg, 51, is a Texas-born artist who lives in New York and Florida. Wyeth, 30, a portrait artist, is the son of Andrew Wyeth and lives in Chadds Ford, Pa.

Circleville Chapter OES Announces Committees

Committees for the new year were announced during the regular meeting of Circleville Chapter 90, Order of Eastern Star, Tuesday night in the Masonic Temple. Betsy French, worthy matron, presided at the meeting and welcomed all present. "At Christmas" from "Lines to Live By" was read by Clarence Radcliffe, worthy patron.

Past matrons and patrons honored and escorted to the East for greetings were Mary E. Radcliffe, Elaine Bowman, Marcelyn Evans, Betty LeMay, Leona Riegel, Bonnie Rector, Gladys Shepler, Kathryn Thomerson, Donna Foreman, Chestora Peters, William Hall, Kenneth Riegel, Byron LeMay and Dwight Rector.

Committees for the new year are as follows: audit, Kenneth Riegel, chairman, Erma Sharpe and Rosemary Horn; budget, Jean Carter, chairman, Art Bowman, Bea Barnett and Helen Spring; examining, Art Bowman and Leona Riegel.

Good cheer, Mildred Younkin, Ashville and Elaine Bowman, Circleville; instruction, Clarence Radcliffe, Thelma Noecker and Chestora Peters; kitchen, Mildred Butts.

Masonic Temple board, Miriam Barnhart; paraphernalia, all officers; special information, Mary E. Radcliffe and Pauline Cook; trustees, Pauline Hunkley, Joseph Peters and Geneva Brink.

Unit 134 Legion Auxiliary Holds Annual Holiday Party

Members of Unit 134 American Legion Auxiliary met in the Post Home Monday evening to share a carry-in dinner and gift exchange. Activities began with prayer by Maggie Mavis, chaplain. The meeting room was decorated in the Christmas theme.

Mrs. Harold Hoffman, president, conducted the business session. Mrs. Jo Hunter, community service, reported transportation to Veterans Hospital, for two Family Care Home veterans. Any member doing work in their church, such as Sunday School teaching, help at any convalescent home, blood donor program or an actual blood donor is asked to report this work to Mrs. Hunter so it can be reported to her district chairman.

Mrs. Roseann Stinson, children and youth, gave her report of a joint Christmas project with the Post of assistance to six Circleville families. She expressed appreciation to the Post members for this help at a time when people need to know others care about them. Mrs. Robert Stephens, VA&R told of the annual Christmas Party for patients in Ward 1C, Veterans Hospital, Chillicothe carrying on a tradition started fifty-five years ago.

Mrs. Betty Woods reported 155 paid members. Mrs. Hoffman read the proposed changes of the Unit constitution and By-Laws to bring them up to date with the national ones. They

First Christmas Celebrated At New Senior Citizen Center

The first Christmas season in the new Pickaway Senior Center location at 8010 U.S. Route 22 East (site of the former Children's Home) found the center gaily decorated with tinsel, wreaths and Christmas arrangements. The flower boxes in front of the building were filled with greenery and Christmas tree decorations. The outside decorations were done by Cyrus and Josephine Dille who had brought the greens from their farm near Laurelville.

Thursday afternoon before Christmas, members and friends were invited to drop in for refreshments and visiting. Cheese balls and crackers and a variety of cookies, along with coffee and tea were served from a holiday decorated table and guests were seated at card tables covered with

Easter Seal Society Schedules Meeting

Members of Pickaway County Easter Seal Society have scheduled a meeting for 1 p.m. Tuesday at headquarters, 216½ S. Court St.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. James Price, 25557 Sisk Road, and Mrs. Daisy Price, 118 Edison Ave., have returned from Houma, La., where they attended the wedding of their daughter and granddaughter, Nancy, and Douglas Delaney.

Mr. and Mrs. David Hilyard and family, Jeff, Andy, Liza, and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Simon of Cleveland, spent the Christmas holidays with Mrs. Eloise Dunkle, Route 2, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Altmeyer, 1173 Lone Pine Road.

Vouching, Kathryn Thomerson, chairman, and all officers; ways and means, Jean Carter, Bea Barnett, Helen Spring, Gladys Shepler and Bonnie Rector.

Officers and members were urged to attend the District School of Instruction in Frankfort on Jan. 18. A social hour beginning at 3 p.m., followed by a business meeting at 4 p.m. will be held in the Frankfort Masonic Temple. The dinner at 5:30 p.m. and School of Instruction at 7 p.m. will be at Adena Hill School. Reservations for the dinner must be made with Mary Radcliffe prior to Jan. 8.

Following the meeting, a social hour in the dining room was hosted by Miriam Barnhart and Geneva Brink. Refreshments were served from a table decorated with holly and red candles.

The next regular meeting on Jan. 11 will be the 79th anniversary of the chapter, founded Jan. 11, 1898. Obligation night will be observed and officers will wear chapter dresses.

will be read for a second time at the January meeting and voted upon that night and members are urged to attend to hear them.

Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. Stephens conducted a special presentation of a 50 Hour American Legion Auxiliary Veterans Administration Hospital Volunteer pin to Mrs. Hunter. To qualify an auxiliary member must serve a 50 hour probationary period doing work at Chillicothe Veterans Hospital from assisting patients to the clinic, writing letters, attending the monthly unit ward parties and doing clerical work. The hospital Voluntary Services keep a record of the hours and notify the ALA hospital representative when the required hours have been served.

Each year in May at National Hospital Day these volunteers are awarded certificates starting at 100 hours to thousands of hours. Also earning her pin was Mrs. William McClarren who was unable to attend the meeting. festive cloths and each having a Christmas centerpiece.

Later in the afternoon the group sang Christmas carols, accompanied at the piano by Bessie Pierce and Wanda Hamilton.

The new center is open weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Membership in the center is open to all area residents, age 55 or over, regardless of race, creed or national origin. If one of a couple is under 55, both may join.

Newsletters are mailed monthly to all members, the weekly schedule at the center is published every Saturday in the Herald, and there is a 10 minute radio broadcast every Friday from ten minutes of one to 1 o'clock.

Applications for Golden Buckeye Cards are available at the center as well as lists of participating merchants. One must be 65 to get a Golden Buckeye card and bring a Social Security number and some proof of age, such as a drivers license.

Senior Citizens are also invited to eat lunch weekdays at the Food and Fellowship site in the basement of the Eagles Lodge, 135 E. Main St. This project is under the direction of Martha Wiggins of PICCA, with cooperation from the Pickaway Senior Center. A hot, nutritious balanced meal is served every week day noon followed by a short period of fellowship, games, songs or seasonal activities. Those age 60 or over may pay whatever they feel they can afford. This is handled with a small envelope to put the money in and dropped in a box and no one knows what the contribution was, as no names are written on the envelope. Those under 60 are asked for a specific sum of money. To make a reservation call 474-8617 one day before and reservations for future dates may be made at the lunch location or by telephone.

Unit 134 Legion Auxiliary Holds Annual Holiday Party

Members of Unit 134 American Legion Auxiliary met in the Post Home Monday evening to share a carry-in dinner and gift exchange. Activities began with prayer by Maggie Mavis, chaplain. The meeting room was decorated in the Christmas theme.

Mrs. Harold Hoffman, president, conducted the business session. Mrs. Jo Hunter, community service, reported transportation to Veterans Hospital, for two Family Care Home veterans. Any member doing work in their church, such as Sunday School teaching, help at any convalescent home, blood donor program or an actual blood donor is asked to report this work to Mrs. Hunter so it can be reported to her district chairman.

Mrs. Roseann Stinson, children and youth, gave her report of a joint Christmas project with the Post of assistance to six Circleville families. She expressed appreciation to the Post members for this help at a time when people need to know others care about them. Mrs. Robert Stephens, VA&R told of the annual Christmas Party for patients in Ward 1C, Veterans Hospital, Chillicothe carrying on a tradition started fifty-five years ago.

Mrs. Betty Woods reported 153 paid members. Mrs. Hoffman read the proposed changes of the Unit constitution and By-Laws to bring them up to date with the national ones. They will be read for a second time at the January meeting and voted upon that night and members are urged to attend to hear them.

Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. Stephens conducted a special presentation of a 50 Hour American Legion Auxiliary Veterans Administration Hospital Volunteer pin to Mrs. Hunter. To qualify an auxiliary member must serve a 50 hour probationary period doing work at Chillicothe Veterans Hospital from assisting patients to the clinic, writing letters, attending the monthly unit ward parties and doing clerical work. The hospital Voluntary Services keep a record of the hours and notify the ALA hospital representative when the required hours have been served.

Each year in May at National Hospital Day these volunteers are awarded certificates starting at 100 hours to thousands of hours. Also earning her pin was Mrs. William McClarren who was unable to attend the meeting. William McClarren, Hall-Adkins Post 134 American Legionnaire was also recognized for serving his 50 hours assisting with the monthly ward parties, annual Christmas shopping days and Hospital Day.

Mrs. Hoffman welcomed Mrs. Julia Lemon and Mrs. Vivienne Zepp as guests for the evening. Mrs. Mavis closed the meeting with prayer.

First Christmas Celebrated At New Senior Citizen Center

The first Christmas season in the new Pickaway Senior Center location at 8010 U.S. Route 22 East (site of the former Children's Home) found the center gaily decorated with tinsel, wreaths and Christmas arrangements. The flower boxes in front of the building were filled with greenery and Christmas tree decorations. The outside decorations were done by Cyrus and Josephine Dille who had brought the greens from their farm near Laurelville.

Thursday afternoon before Christmas, members and friends were invited to drop in for refreshments and visiting. Cheese balls and crackers and a variety of cookies, along with coffee and tea were served from a holiday decorated table and guests were seated at card tables covered with festive cloths and each having a Christmas centerpiece.

Later in the afternoon the group sang Christmas carols, accompanied at the piano by Bessie Pierce and Wanda Hamilton.

The new center is open weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Membership in the center is open to all area residents, age 55 or over, regardless of race, creed or national origin. If one of a couple is under 55, both may join.

Newsletters are mailed monthly to all members, the weekly schedule at the center is published every Saturday in the Herald, and there is a 10 minute radio broadcast every Friday from ten minutes of one to 1 o'clock.

Applications for Golden Buckeye Cards are available at the center as well as lists of participating merchants. One must be 65 to get a Golden Buckeye card and bring a Social Security number and some proof of age, such as a drivers license.

Coffee Prices Hurt Trade Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soaring coffee prices are a major reason for an expected 16 per cent decline in this year's agricultural trade balance, the difference between U.S. farm exports and imports, according to Agriculture Department analysts.

Six weeks ago USDA projected that all agricultural imports in 1976-77 would total about $12 billion, compared with exports estimated at a record of $22.8 billion. That would have meant a farm trade surplus with other countries of $10.8 billion.

But one department expert said Tuesday that rising coffee, tea and cocoa prices are expected to raise imports at least to $12.5 billion this year, with most of the increase resulting from higher coffee prices.

That will push the farm trade surplus down further to about $10.3 billion and possibly to $10 billion if the value of U.S. farm exports declines a bit from the projected $22.8 billion.

The farm trade surplus soared from about $1.8 billion in 1970-71 to a record of nearly $12.4 billion in 1974-75 as prices and export volumes for major commodities climbed sharply. It declined slightly to less than $12.3 billion in the 1975-76 fiscal year which ended Sept. 30.

Thus, the current year's farm trade surplus now tentatively forecast at $10.3 billion or possibly less will be the smallest since it was about $7.2 billion in 1972-73.

The Ford administration, particularly former Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, has consistently boasted about U.S. farm exports helping offset American imports of oil and other products.

While this still will be the case, the rise in farm imports, particularly coffee, means that there will be nearly $2 billion less in 1976-77 commodity sales overseas to help finance purchases of foreign oil and other items.

The USDA analyst, who asked not to be identified, said his figures were preliminary and that there is always the possibility that coffee prices will not rise as much as some think they might.

As a group, imports of coffee, tea and cocoa are now projected at about $4.5 billion in 1976-77 against $4.1 billion forecast on Nov. 15. The analyst said another $100 million increase is likely for other imported products.

Last year, coffee, tea and cocoa imports totaled slightly more than $3 billion, and in 1974-75 those were valued at $1.9 billion.

The source said that the "unit value" of coffee imports in October, the most recent month analyzed, was $1.23 a pound for green, unroasted coffee beans and that for the entire 1976-77 fiscal year they might average around $1.37 a pound.

About a year ago, according to USDA records, the unit price of imported coffee beans was about 58 cents a pound. The short crop of coffee in Brazil, caused by freeze damage last year, is the main reason for world prices going up.

Sunday visitors in the Cook home were Mrs. George Mowery and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cook.

Coffee Prices Hurt Trade Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soaring coffee prices are a major reason for an expected 16 per cent decline in this year's agricultural trade balance, the difference between U.S. farm exports and imports, according to Agriculture Department analysts.

Six weeks ago USDA projected that all agricultural imports in 1976-77 would total about $12 billion, compared with exports estimated at a record of $22.8 billion. That would have meant a farm trade surplus with other countries of $10.8 billion.

But one department expert said Tuesday that rising coffee, tea and cocoa prices are expected to raise imports at least to $12.5 billion this year, with most of the increase resulting from higher coffee prices.

That will push the farm trade surplus down further to about $10.3 billion and possibly to $10 billion if the value of U.S. farm exports declines a bit from the projected $22.8 billion.

The farm trade surplus soared from about $1.8 billion in 1970-71 to a record of nearly $12.4 billion in 1974-75 as prices and export volumes for major commodities climbed sharply. It declined slightly to less than $12.3 billion in the 1975-76 fiscal year which ended Sept. 30.

Thus, the current year's farm trade surplus now tentatively forecast at $10.3 billion or possibly less will be the smallest since it was about $7.2 billion in 1972-73.

The Ford administration, particularly former Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, has consistently boasted about U.S. farm exports helping offset American imports of oil and other products.

While this still will be the case, the rise in farm imports, particularly coffee, means that there will be nearly $2 billion less in 1976-77 commodity sales overseas to help finance purchases of foreign oil and other items.

The USDA analyst, who asked not to be identified, said his figures were preliminary and that there is always the possibility that coffee prices will not rise as much as some think they might.

As a group, imports of coffee, tea and cocoa are now projected at about $4.5 billion in 1976-77 against $4.1 billion forecast on Nov. 15. The analyst said another $100 million increase is likely for other imported products.

Last year, coffee, tea and cocoa imports totaled slightly more than $3 billion, and in 1974-75 those were valued at $1.9 billion.

The source said that the "unit value" of coffee imports in October, the most recent month analyzed, was $1.23 a pound for green, unroasted coffee beans and that for the entire 1976-77 fiscal year they might average around $1.37 a pound.

About a year ago, according to USDA records, the unit price of imported coffee beans was about 58 cents a pound. The short crop of coffee in Brazil, caused by freeze damage last year, is the main reason for world prices going up.

Abortion Worries Pregnant Teen

DEAR ABBY: I think I'm pregnant. I've made love with my boyfriend, but it wasn't planned or we would have used something. I need some information on a clinic I can go to if I need an abortion.

This really scares me as I've never been to a hospital in my life. I've heard a lot of stories about girls who have had abortions. Some die, and others can never have children.

Are there any free clinics? I can't raise a lot of money. Maybe a few hundred dollars. Is that enough for a safe abortion? I'm in good health except for this problem.

I can't tell my parents. It would kill them. They've already been through this with my sister, only she got married. I swore this would never happen to me.

Please answer me in the column. No way can a reply go to my home. I am 19 and was a "nice" girl before this happened.

DEAR SCARED: First, to to your local Planned Parenthood Clinic. They will arrange for an examination to determine whether or not you are pregnant. If you are, they will provide expert counseling to help you make the decision that is best for you. Please write again and let me know how you are. I care.

DEAR ABBY: It's easy to understand why a married man of 45 would leave his wife for a younger woman, but how about a man that age who would leave a beautiful 36-year-old wife for an old, wrinkled grandmother of 55?

That is exactly what my brother did. He can't be in his right mind. Don't tell me he is looking for "mother substitute." Our mother is still living, and if ever a man got his share of mother love, Brother did. He was the "baby" of the family, and the only boy, born after four girls.

So please tell me what an intelligent, good-looking professional man can see in a 55-year-old divorced retread. It's not money. She doesn't have any, and he has plenty.

DISGUSTED IN CHICAGO
DEAR DISGUSTED: One of life's most baffling mysteries is what people "in love" see in each other. But I suspect your brother's reasons are older than the hills and younger than springtime. (P.S. You are not your brother's keeper.)

DEAR ABBY: I applaud that clergyman who was man enough to admit that confessing his infidelity to his wife was a terrible mistake.

My husband of 15 years, whom I loved, respected and trusted implicitly, confessed such an affair to me two years ago, and our marriage will never be the same again.

That boastful confession was deadly, despite his proclaimed love for me. It was the biggest mistake he ever made.

If only one person reading this is considering such a confession to "clense his soul," I urge you, please, don't!

EMPTY IN NEW JERSEY
DEAR EMPTY: Your letter is full of wisdom. Thanks for sharing.

Mississippi Queen Real Problem Boat

CINCINNATI (AP) — Steamboat "purists" may be having a chuckle at the current plight of the Mississippi Queen, but her owners, the Delta Queen Steamboat Co., hope they won't have the last laugh.

Purists said that the boat didn't even look like the image of the steamboat evoked by Mark Twain. They claimed its massive bulk would never be amenable to the problems of sailing on the Mississippi River.

Well, whatever secret those oldtime steamboats had, the Mississippi Queen doesn't have it—yet.

Since August, her owners have had her in drydock in New Orleans redesigning the engine and the paddlewheel.

When she officially began regular service in July, she had a movie theater, a swimming pool and a beauty parlor. But she didn't have enough power to keep up a steady speed to cruise on the Mississippi.

"It's a difficult thing to do putting an engine designed 50 years ago in a new vessel. It becomes a complicated thing," said Betty Blake, president of the Cincinnati-based Co.

"It's like putting old-fashioned heating in a skyscraper. There are a lot of worlds to meld together."

The company knew it was taking a gamble just building the Mississippi Queen. Wood could no longer be used because of safety regulations not in effect when the company's other steamboat, The Delta Queen, was completed.

Other parts had to be modified to fit the current plan.

"Some of the things we did, we just didn't do right," Ms. Blake admitted. "A lot of technology simply had to be rediscovered and in some cases it was just hit-or-miss."

The mistakes have been costly. The boat originally cost about $23 million to build and the added repairs will run several million dollars, Ms. Blake estimates.

Added to that will be a loss of revenue of between three and four million dollars in cancellations from cruises scheduled for this year.

The Mississippi Queen is scheduled to be back in the water early next year and beginning March 5, it will be making cruises from New Orleans to Natchez, Miss.

That relatively short distance will give engineers a chance to see how well they have learned from past mistakes.

"I think we should be able to recover and show a profit again in a few years. This had just delayed us a bit," Ms. Blake said. "We've had problems before and we've always been able to overcome them."

Reverend Denounced

NEW YORK (AP) — Leaders of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish organizations have denounced the Rev. Sun Myung Moon and his Unification Church as "anti-democratic, anti-Jewish and in direct conflict with basic Christian teachings."

At a news conference here Tuesday, leaders of the religious groups accused the Rev. Mr. Moon of fostering hatred and bigotry against Christians and Jews and encouraging the breakup of families.

Appearing at the news conference were the Rev. James J. LeBar of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York; the Rev. Dr. Jorge Lara-Braud of the National Council of Churches, which includes Protestant and Orthodox denominations; Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum; and Rabbi A. James Rudin of the American Jewish Committee.

Shawn Byrn, a Moon movement staff member who identified himself as an inactive Catholic priest from Ireland, rose to defend the Rev. Mr. Moon as a proponent of peace, love and "anti-faithlessness" to God. He said anti-Jewish and anti-Christian teachings of the Rev. Mr. Moon's church were exaggerated.

Power Siting Panel Asks More Data

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Power Siting Commission decided Tuesday it needed more information on an alternative site for a fossil fuel power plant that the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. wants to build in southeastern Ohio.

The company favors a site in Washington County but has offered as an alternative a location in Meigs County. The two sites are about 30 miles apart in rural areas along the Ohio River.

C&SOE suggested it had provided enough information on the alternative site and asked that it not be required to submit more.

"The commission wanted some additional information on such things as the effect on fish life, and so on," said Chairman Ned E. Williams. "We requested the staff to develop by next month their recommendations on what additional information is needed on the alternative site."

The recommendations are expected to be presented to the commission at its Jan. 25 meeting.

The commission took action on company requests to waive certain technical information in connection with the primary site.

Williams said the requests dealt with information required in the application for a certificate of environmental compatibility and public need and "some were granted and some weren't."

Village Police Force Resigns

BUTLER, Ohio (AP) — This Richland County village's three-man police force resigned Tuesday night, giving officials two weeks to find replacements for the community of 1,000.

Chief Fred Horne, a 6-year employee of the force, resigned to join the Richland County sheriff's department. Parttime officers Phil Stortz and

Royal Freed gave no reasons for their resignations.

Horne and Stortz will quit Jan. 15 and 16, Freed on Jan. 1.

Village officials had turned down Horne's request for raises, a new cruiser and reinstatement of a fourth police officer. Officials said they did not have the estimated $23,000 to finance the request.

of 55?

That is exactly what my brother did. He can't be in his right mind. Don't tell me he is looking for "mother substitute." Our mother is still living, and if ever a man got his share of mother love, Brother did. He was the "baby" of the family, and the only boy, born after four girls.

So please tell me what an intelligent, good-looking professional man can see in a 55-year-old divorced retread. It's not money. She doesn't have any, and he has plenty.

DISGUSTED IN CHICAGO
DEAR DISGUSTED: One of life's most baffling mysteries is what people "in love" see in each other. But I suspect your brother's reasons are older than the hills and younger than springtime. (P.S. You are not your brother's keeper.)

DEAR ABBY: I applaud that clergyman who was man enough to admit that confessing his infidelity to his wife was a terrible mistake.

My husband of 15 years, whom I loved, respected and trusted implicitly, confessed such an affair to me two years ago, and our marriage will never be the same again.

That boastful confession was deadly, despite his proclaimed love for me. It was the biggest mistake he ever made.

If only one person reading this is considering such a confession to "cense his soul," I urge you, please, please, don't!

Mississippi Queen Real Problem Boat

CINCINNATI (AP) — Steamboat "purists" may be having a chuckle at the current plight of the Mississippi Queen, but her owners, the Delta Queen Steamboat Co., hope they won't have the last laugh.

Purists said that the boat didn't even look like the image of the steamboat evoked by Mark Twain. They claimed its massive bulk would never be amenable to the problems of sailing on the Mississippi River.

Well, whatever secret those oldtime steamboats had, the Mississippi Queen doesn't have it—yet.

Since August, her owners have had her in drydock in New Orleans redesigning the engine and the paddlewheel.

When she officially began regular service in July, she had a movie theater, a swimming pool and a beauty parlor. But she didn't have enough power to keep up a steady speed to cruise on the Mississippi.

"It's a difficult thing to do putting an engine designed 50 years ago in a new vessel. It becomes a complicated thing," said Betty Blake, president of the Cincinnati-based Co.

"It's like putting old-fashioned heating in a skyscraper. There are a lot of worlds to meld together."

The company knew it was taking a gamble just building the Mississippi Queen. Wood could no longer be used because of safety regulations not in effect when the company's other steamboat, The Delta Queen, was completed.

Other parts had to be modified to fit the current plan.

"Some of the things we did, we just didn't do right," Ms. Blake admitted. "A lot of technology simply had to be rediscovered and in some cases it was just hit-or-miss."

The mistakes have been costly. The boat originally cost about $23 million to build and the added repairs will run several million dollars, Ms. Blake estimates.

Added to that will be a loss of revenue of between three and four million dollars in cancellations from cruises scheduled for this year.

The Mississippi Queen is scheduled to be back in the water early next year and beginning March 5, it will be making cruises from New Orleans to Natchez, Miss.

That relatively short distance will give engineers a chance to see how well they have learned from past mistakes.

"I think we should be able to recover and show a profit again in a few years. This had just delayed us a bit," Ms. Blake said. "We've had problems before and we've always been able to overcome them."

Reverend Denounced

NEW YORK (AP) — Leaders of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish organizations have denounced the Rev. Sun Myung Moon and his Unification Church as "anti-democratic, anti-Jewish and in direct conflict with basic Christian teachings."

At a news conference here Tuesday, leaders of the religious groups accused the Rev. Mr. Moon of fostering hatred and bigotry against Christians and Jews and encouraging the breakup of families.

Appearing at the news conference were the Rev. James J. LeBar of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York; the Rev. Dr. Jorge Lara-Braud of the National Council of Churches, which includes Protestant and Orthodox denominations; Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum; and Rabbi A. James Rudin of the American Jewish Committee.

Shawn Byrn, a Moon movement staff member who identified himself as an inactive Catholic priest from Ireland, rose to defend the Rev. Mr. Moon as a proponent of peace, love and "anti-faithlessness" to God. He said anti-Jewish and anti-Christian teachings of the Rev. Mr. Moon's church were exaggerated.

Village Police Force Resigns

BUTLER, Ohio (AP) — This Richland County village's three-man police force resigned Tuesday night, giving officials two weeks to find replacements for the community of 1,000.

Chief Fred Horne, a 6-year employee of the force, resigned to join the Richland County sheriff's department. Parttime officers Phil Stortz and

Royal Freed gave no reasons for their resignations.

Horne and Stortz will quit Jan. 15 and 16, Freed on Jan. 1.

Village officials had turned down Horne's request for raises, a new cruiser and reinstatement of a fourth police officer. Officials said they did not have the estimated $23,000 to finance the request.

State Trooper Nabs Car Thieves

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A state trooper stopped a convoy of stolen cars valued at nearly $30,000 early Wednesday, authorities said.

Police said the four late model Corvettes were stolen about 2:15 a.m. from a Maunee auto dealership, by thieves who also took the keys to 75 or 80 other used cars.

The lead car was spotted by a trooper on the Ohio Turnpike who followed it to the Wyandotte service plaza just south of Seneca in Sandusky County.

A few minutes later three other Corvettes pulled into the parking area and the trooper, assisted by Woodville and Genoa policemen arrested five suspects.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Power Siting Commission decided Tuesday it needed more information on an alternative site for a fossil fuel power plant that the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. wants to build in southeastern Ohio.

The company favors a site in Washington County but has offered as an alternative a location in Meigs County. The two sites are about 30 miles apart in rural areas along the Ohio River.

C&SOE suggested it had provided enough information on the alternative site and asked that it not be required to submit more.

"The commission wanted some additional information on such things as the effect on fish life, and so on," said Chairman Ned E. Williams. "We requested the staff to develop by next month their recommendations on what additional information is needed on the alternative site."

The recommendations are expected to be presented to the commission at its Jan. 25 meeting.

The commission took action on company requests to waive certain technical information in connection with the primary site.

Williams said the requests dealt with information required in the application for a certificate of environmental compatibility and public need and "some were granted and some weren't."

Ohio Weathers Recession, Eyes Better 1977

By ROBERT E. MILLER
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio recovered a little better than most states in 1976 from the previous year's recession and can look forward to better progress in 1977.

That, in a nutshell, is how economists and observers appraise the year that has gone by. Many problems lie ahead. Solutions depend largely on what happens in Washington, and to some extent, at the state level.

Revenues to the state continued to increase substantially, but not enough to meet staggering demands for education and social services. In fact, the governor's executive budget for the 1977-1979 biennium will anticipate revenue growth from the previous fiscal period of about 20 per cent.

Those estimates for about $1.5 billion in revenue growth are projected on the basis of the national economy, lending credibility to arguments there is not too much that can be done at the state level about such problems as unemployment.

Gov. James A. Rhodes, with some backing, takes the other tack, contending tax breaks for industry will increase revenues and cut welfare rolls in the end.

His detractors, mainly Democrats and others fearful of cuts in school and welfare programs, are more interested in projections about national developments in which Ohio could benefit faster.

Favorable outlooks for the steel, machine tool, and auto industries are the basis for the economists' 1977 optimism, guarded as it is. These are basic to Ohio's economy.

Wilford L. L'Esperance, economics professor at Ohio State University and writer for the university's business research bulletin, predicted continuing demands for steel and automobiles—"higher than this year but not by very much"—and said the state should benefit from what he sees as a growing demand for machine tools.

L'Esperance said 1976 "has been a good year for Ohio's economy. The unemployment rate has declined in Ohio's major cities so that it is now less than the national level."

However, he and others concede that the outlook for 1977 could depend upon the economic policies of the new Carter Administration. L'Esperance noted that the two most often mentioned possibilities—tax cuts and increased government spending—would have a direct favorable effect on Ohio.

A tax cut could mean a boost in demand for so-called "white consumer goods" such as refrigerators and appliances made in such cities as Dayton and Mansfield, while bigger government spending programs would help Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, and Toledo, all geared more to the national economy than other Ohio cities.

Some cities, notably Toledo, have what L'Esperance called "a stabilizing influence" on the state's economy. He noted that because of its industrial makeup, Toledo benefits from increased car sales, but doesn't suffer so greatly when the demand for them decreases because of the city's replacement parts industry. He mentioned spark plugs (Champion) as an example.

Roger Brown, economist for Republic Steel Corp. of Cleveland, was among industrial spokesmen who said Ohio's economy is closely tied to national business cycles.

He said the steel industry's performance during 1976, like other national industries which affect the state's industrial health, started off with a bang and built to near maximum capacity in the spring, to slip a few weeks later. Last April, he said, "we thought we had a steel boom on our hands." Within a few weeks, Brown said, due to a slowing in the growth of the general economy, the market turned around. At the same time, Ohio's steel industry was affected by the United Auto Workers' strike that started in mid-September against Ford Motor Co. In addition, he said customers who a few months early had feared shortages of steel then saw shortages "not very likely."

But he was optimistic about 1977. He noted that manufacturers, mainly the auto industry which uses most of Ohio's steel products, have depleted their inventories. "We are looking forward to good gains. There are no inventories lying around," he said.

The Republic economist said he based his opinion on favorable forecasts for the auto industry. "The mills in Ohio, more than any other state, are all oriented toward the auto industry. Ohio will definitely participate in that part of the recovery (from the 1975 recession)," he said.

The state's unemployment statistics reflect that while Ohio's partial recovery in 1976 was better than the nation as a whole, the rate still was far higher than it was during the prerecession year of 1973.

William Papier, statistician for the Bureau of Employment Services, said the rate at the end of October 1976 stood at 6.3 per cent, compared to a national average of 7.2 per cent at that time.

In 1973, Ohio had an average unemployment rate of 4.3 per cent while the national rate was 4.9 per cent. In the recession year of 1975, Ohio caught and surpassed the national rate, ending that year with a national average of 9.1 per cent compared to 8.5 nationally.

Because of Ohio's heavy employment by manufacturers, it tends to experience more pronounced "ups and downs" than some other states and the nation as a whole.

Papier pointed out that nationwide, manufacturers employ about 25 per cent of the work force while in Ohio in 1974 an estimated 1,414,000 factory jobs made up about 33 per cent of the work force. That figure dropped to 1,258,000 in March 1975 when the state's jobless rate soared to 10.1 per cent.

Prof. Paul G. Craig at OSU, who keeps track of long range aspects of Ohio's economy, said the state "did a little better" than most other states in this year's recovery from recession. But he said it probably was because Ohio had dipped a little lower than many states during the recession.

Craig said "in my opinion, Ohio will continue to do a little bit better than most next year." But he said growth will be slow because national growth trends stress the service and high technology industries, in which Ohio is not prominent.

The professor said Ohio's economy is substantially built around "matured" businesses such as steel and other heavy industries which are growing but not creating large numbers of new jobs because of automation. "I'm not saying Ohio is living in the past century, but we're not in the forefront. And we haven't been now for more than a decade," he said.

Rhodes, who devoted most of the first two years of his four-year term to trying to give Ohio industries a better tax break, has vowed to continue those efforts in 1977. Rhodes' setbacks have been considerable, the biggest being voter rejection in 1975 of a four-part package he said would make Ohio "depression proof."

In the summer of 1976 and again in the fall, the legislature refused to adopt Rhodes' proposals to forgive certain property taxes as an incentive to industry to expand or locate in the state's inner city areas.

Part of the governor's problem came from some of Ohio's university "brain trust" which challenged the governor's contention that taxes play an impelling role in corporate decisions with regard to business expansions.

Prof. Henry Hunker of Ohio State, author of a widely-acclaimed text on industrial development, called the tax issue "a smokescreen." He said industries are much more interested in such things as the cost of production, including labor costs, and transportation, and that tax considerations "rarely play a role."

Dr. John J. Treacy of Wright State University in Dayton supports one Rhodes' bill that would give industries a better break on the purchase of new machinery and equipment. He agreed with Ohio State's Craig that Ohio's heavy industries, many which evolved during and after World War II, now face the need to retool or replace old equipment.

Edward Wolking, director of community affairs for the Greater Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, said the Rhodes' proposals, while not guaranteeing a panacea to problems, would provide "some additional tools."

Rhodes' director of economic and community development, James Duerk, collected statistics showing that tax incentives can be a decisive factor in corporate decisions, especially if "everything else is equal."

The argument will continue in 1977. Collections of state taxes reflected Ohio's participation in the national economic recovery in 1976, although they do not take into account an unemployment problem continually inflated by the matriculation of youth into the available labor force. In other words, tax collections and the ranks of the unemployed can increase at the same time.

State Treasurer Gertrude W. Donahy reported collections for the first five months of the state's current fiscal year, July 1 through Nov. 30, increased substantially from the corresponding period in recession year 1975.

The sales tax yielded $507.8 million during the five months, compared to $450.6 million (up 12.6 per cent); the income tax produced $228 million, compared to $191.3 million (up 19.3 per cent), and the cigarette tax $83.2 million, compared to $81.8 million (up 1.82 per cent).

The corporate franchise tax, the other major state revenue source, showed a decrease, but mostly because corporations pay the bulk of their taxes in the first six months of the calendar year. They totaled $22.5 million for the five months in 1976, compared to $27.5 million the previous year — a decline of 18.3 per cent.

For the state's June 30 to July 1 fiscal year, ended July 1, 1976, corporate taxes totaled $385.3 million, compared to $384.3 million the previous fiscal year, or an increase of 2.5 per cent.

The professor said Ohio's economy is substantially built around “matured” businesses such as steel and other heavy industries which are growing but not creating large numbers of new jobs because of automation. “I'm not saying Ohio is living in the past century, but we're not in the forefront. And we haven't been now for more than a decade,” he said.

Rhodes, who devoted most of the first two years of his four-year term to trying to give Ohio industries a better tax break, has vowed to continue those efforts in 1977. Rhodes' setbacks have been considerable, the biggest being voter rejection in 1975 of a four-part package he said would make Ohio “depression proof.”

In the summer of 1976 and again in the fall, the legislature refused to adopt Rhodes' proposals to forgive certain property taxes as an incentive to industry to expand or locate in the state's inner city areas.

Part of the governor's problem came from some of Ohio's university “brain trust” which challenged the governor's contention that taxes play an impelling role in corporate decisions with regard to business expansions.

Prof. Henry Hunker of Ohio State, author of a widely-acclaimed text on industrial development, called the tax issue “a smokescreen.” He said industries are much more interested in such things as the cost of production, including labor costs, and transportation, and that tax considerations “rarely play a role.”

Dr. John J. Treacy of Wright State University in Dayton supports one Rhodes' bill that would give industries a better break on the purchase of new machinery and equipment. He agreed with Ohio State's Craig that Ohio's heavy industries, many which evolved during and after World War II, now face the need to retool or replace old equipment.

Edward Wolking, director of community affairs for the Greater Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, said the Rhodes' proposals, while not guaranteeing a panacea to problems, would provide “some additional tools.”

Rhodes' director of economic and community development, James Duerk, collected statistics showing that tax incentives can be a decisive factor in corporate decisions, especially if “everything else is equal.”

The argument will continue in 1977.

Collections of state taxes reflected Ohio's participation in the national economic recovery in 1976, although they do not take into account an unemployment problem continually inflated by the matriculation of youth into the available labor force. In other words, tax collections and the ranks of the unemployed can increase at the same time.

State Treasurer Gertrude W. Donahey reported collections for the first five months of the state's current fiscal year, July 1 through Nov. 30, increased substantially from the corresponding period in recession year 1975.

The sales tax yielded $507.8 million during the five months, compared to $450.6 million (up 12.6 per cent); the income tax produced $228 million, compared to $191.3 million (up 19.3 per cent), and the cigarette tax $83.2 million, compared to $81.8 million (up 1.82 per cent).

The corporate franchise tax, the other major state revenue source, showed a decrease, but mostly because corporations pay the bulk of their taxes in the first six months of the calendar year. They totaled $22.5 million for the five months in 1976, compared to $27.5 million the previous year — a decline of 18.3 per cent.

For the state's June 30 to July 1 fiscal year, ended July 1, 1976, corporate taxes totaled $385.3 million, compared to $384.3 million the previous fiscal year, or an increase of 2.5 per cent.

1976 Brought Some Relief From Food Prices

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Nineteen seventy-six brought consumers some relief from higher food prices and provided farmers with record harvests that should help keep supermarket bills from spiraling in 1977.

Americans also got additional protection from the government in a wide variety of areas affecting the goods and services they buy. But there were indications of a growing concern about too much regulation by Washington.

The slower rate of increase in the cost of food was in line with a general easing of the inflationary trend, with prices for all retail items increasing less than 6 per cent.

Food prices went up between 3 and 4 per cent in 1976 — less than half the rate of increase in 1975 and less than a third of the boosts in 1973 and 1974.

USDA economists predicted a similar 3-to-4 per cent increase in 1977, thanks in part to corn and wheat harvests which, while slightly lower than anticipated in the spring, still were estimated at record levels.

There were some exceptions to the trend. Coffee prices — which started soaring with reports of a freeze in Brazil during the summer of 1975 — went up. And up. And up. By the end of the year, coffee cost from $2.25 to $2.50 a pound, up 50 or 60 cents a pound from the price 12 months earlier.

Shoppers with a sweet tooth also were out of luck. Sugar prices continued their decline from the record levels of late 1974, but cocoa prices soared and the new year is bringing the 20-cent chocolate bar.

Meat prices, particularly for beef, declined in 1976, but industry and government experts warned that next year would be different.

Cattle producers, claiming they are losing money, have cut back their herds, meaning fewer livestock going to market and higher prices for meat.

The USDA warned that the average retail price of a pound of beef might climb to a record $1.49 in 1977. That compares to a 1976 estimated average of $1.39 and to the 1975 level of $1.46.

Consumers, meanwhile, said they were concerned not only with price, but with quality. Market research studies showed Americans believe many products are not as good as they were 5 or 10 years ago and people are convinced that quality could be improved without any price increases.

Government regulatory agencies including the Federal Trade Commission, Food and Drug Administration, Consumer Product Safety Commission and Civil Aeronautics Board took steps they said were designed to upgrade products and services.

Both President Ford and President-elect Jimmy Carter expressed concern, however, about over-regulation, although they disagreed on what sort of protection is needed for consumers and how government should be reformed.

Ford said he was trying to cut down red tape in existing agencies, while simultaneously making them more responsive to individual complaints. Carter promised an overhaul of the entire bureaucracy to make it more efficient and expressed support for establishment of a separate, independent consumer protection agency.

One of the key areas where the government took action was in the field of the environment, specifically the ozone layer that shields the earth from the ultraviolet radiation that can cause skin cancer.

Concerns had been expressed that fluorocarbons used as propellants in some aerosol sprays were damaging the ozone layer.

The National Academy of Sciences, in a long-awaited report, said that regulation would be necessary at some future time, but it declined to pinpoint the degree of danger that is posed or the date for restrictions.

The government decided not to wait. The Consumer Product Safety Commission started proceedings to ban fluorocarbons in aerosols over which it had jurisdiction, and the Food and Drug Administration proposed requiring warning labels on sprays containing the controversial propellant.

Government actions also opened the way for increased marketplace competition in several areas. Fair trade laws, a Depression-era leftover which opponents called legalized price-fixing, went off the books. And the courts and federal agencies moved to end prohibitions on advertising by professionals, including doctors, lawyers and druggists.

Farmers Happy With Crops, Sad With Prices

By JOE McKNIGHT
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio farmers smiled at the bountiful production in their fields during 1976 but frowned when they took crops to the marketplace.

That was the summary of comments from state and federal agriculture officials on the Ohio farm situation at year's end.

They don't see the overall pricing situation improving very much in coming months.

"Production during the year has been tremendous in virtually every crop," said C. William Swank, executive vice president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation. "Corn, in both yield and acreage was tremendous. We had a good soybean and wheat crops. Hay was good toward the end. Hogs and cattle got into a pricing problem. Prices in all areas were not so good."

The Statistical Reporting Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture bore that out.

If figures from the first 10 months of the year hold up, USDA expects a record corn crop, both in acreage and yield per acre. It reports the 3.9 million acres planted to corn is yielding 101 bushels per acre. This is nine bushels an acre over 1975 and 27 bushels above 1974. It compares with a national average of 85.5 bushels per acre.

Ohio farmers planted 3.9 million acres to corn in 1976, up 410,000 acres over 1975.

Soybeans were planted on 2.88 million acres, down 220,000 acres from the previous year. Yield per acre increased from 32.5 bushels in 1975 to 33 this year, but total production was down five per cent, from just over 100 million bushels in 1975 to 95 million this year.

The Ohio Farmer magazine reported in a year-end story that soybean use may exceed current production, causing a low carryover at the end of the market year. A depressing influence on the Ohio marketplace came from increased grain production in other countries.

"India and Russia had better grain crops than the previous year," Swank said. "We are building grain storage toward 20 per cent of yield next year and this will drive prices down. Corn and wheat prices may be down about one-third next year because of the amount in storage."

He noted that the United States is a major exporter of grain and that Ohio itself directly exports 180 million bushels of grain a year through ports at Toledo, Huron and Cincinnati.

Dr. Wallace Barr, an economist with the Ohio State University agricultural extension service, said corn prices made some recovery over the year.

"But they probably will remain a wee bit below a year ago," he added.

Barr said in the October 1975 to October 1976 period, farmers received an average of $2.55 a bushel for corn in Ohio.

"This was heavily influenced by the drought in the corn belt west of the Mississippi River," he added. "And I expect prices are going to run slightly under that in the current year (starting Oct. 1, 1976)."

"We will have more hogs and poultry to feed but less cattle and the total demand for feed corn will remain high."

Barr noted a reduction in sorgham, barley and oat production this year but added: "Given a strong livestock demand and good export demand, we are in a relatively good balance for 1976-1977."

"We have a large (wheat) crop in Ohio," he said. "Export demand is down. There is an abundant supply around the world. Prices are very discouraging to producers. It can be used as feed grain and that depresses corn."

With milk bringing around $10 per hundred pounds, Barr said Ohio dairy farmers are doing a little better than a couple of years ago.

Milk production in the state this year is expected to be up 3 to 4 percent over 1975 and may approach 4.4 billion pounds. The number of milk cows in the state was down by more than two per cent in mid-1976, but Ohio Farmer said production per cow was averaging 500 pounds per cow higher than 1975.

Hog farmers, Barr said, are being squeezed by prices that have declined over the past six months to a year. He forecast still lower pork prices in coming months.

Ohio Farmer magazine said that as of Sept. 1, Ohio farmers were holding 14 per cent more hogs on farms than a year earlier. Barr said declining beef prices has been discouraging to breeders and feed lot operators.

Swank said fuel for drying grain was not in short supply this year as it was a year ago.

"But the corn just refused to dry in the field," he added. "We got it out early and we had a long growing season."

Court Still Setting Death Dates

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Two Summit County men, convicted in separate 1974 murder cases, have received March 1 execution dates, as the Ohio Supreme Court continued Wednesday a grim review of appeals from death row.

Fifteen men have been scheduled for the electric chair in Lucasville since late November. The high court has upheld death sentences in all of the recent appeal cases.

Floyd Edwards and William Berryman, the latest to join the death list, were found guilty of similar but separate robbery-shootings in Akron late in 1974.

Edwards was convicted in the slaying of Joseph Eshack Jr. on Dec. 28 two years ago, at the victim's tool shop in Akron. The Supreme Court said the fact that an arresting officer told Edwards that the trial court would be "lenient" on him if he told the truth, did not violate the Miranda Doctrine, requiring that a suspect be advised of his rights.

"To promise that the court will be 'lenient' if one tells the truth is not unlike an admonition that it would be in one's 'best interest' to tell the truth and not be caught 'holding the bag'," the jurists wrote, citing federal precedent.

In Perryman's case, the Supreme Court said the trial court should not have allowed "double hearsay statements" in testimony from a detective, but the error was deemed "constitutionally harmless."

"The state's key witness...provided sufficient evidence of appellant's (Perryman) participation in the murder, the detective's testimony was merely cumulative of other corroborating evidence properly before the jury," the court said.

The prosecution's "key witness," the court said, was Perryman's accomplice in the Nov. 27, 1974, robbery.

Rulings in both death penalty cases were unanimous. But appeals to the U.S. Supreme Court could delay the execution dates.

In a 4-3 decision, the Supreme Court sent to a trial court a personal injury claim case in which a truck plowed into a 12-foot long, six foot wide, three foot deep hole in a Scioto County highway.

The lower court had ordered a directed verdict of innocent for the defendant, Goff-Kirby Co., under contract at the time for work on Route 23. The court said claimant Billy Blair had failed to maintain an assured clear distance in his truck.

Majority high court members said "when reasonable minds could read different conclusions" on whether an object can be clearly seen on the road, the dispute should be settled by a jury.

"It was a dark, misty, rainy night," the court noted when Blair became confused by barrel-markers and drove his truck loaded with steel into the hole. He was traveling northbound, about 25 miles per hour.

Justice Leonard J. Stern wrote for the dissenting side: "There is no factual dispute about the dimensions of the hole, and it is of no relevance that the night was rainy and misty, for the effect of those factors is to require that the driver reduce his speed to maintain the assured clear distance."

The court adjourns its present term Thursday.

Christmas Tragedy Overcome

CINCINNATI (AP) — "Five or six people have said something good always comes out of these things," said Joe O'Bryan of the near tragedy suffered by his family prior to Christmas.

"But you don't know what good you have until you almost lose it."

His daughter, Pam, 8, suffered a serious head injury when the family car was involved in an accident a month ago. Since then, she has been able to pull through brain surgery and out of a comma that lasted two weeks.

Her mother, father and brother, Jeff, who were all unhurt, have spent the holiday season at the hospital with Pam.

Yet, said the father, it's been a good Christmas.

When Pam came out of the coma, her parents had hoped she would be the same as before.

"But we were prepared," said Pat O'Bryan, the mother. "We thought she was going to open her eyes and say 'Hi mommy and daddy, what happened?' But it wasn't like that."

The youngster is learning some things all over again through therapy. She can walk with assistance and is beginning to speak.

"Physically, she's doing okay but we don't know how she'll be mentally," said the father.

"When I told Jeff that Pam started talking, he wanted to see her right away. It was something to see them together again. They were inseparable," said O'Bryan.

The family has received wide support including a boost from The Most Rev. Joseph L. Bernadin, Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Cincinnati.

He brought Pam a toy doll during a Christmas Eve visit.

The archbishop told the family he was praying for their daughter. "Pam means a lot to me, too," he said.

Soybean Prospects Point To Shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Agriculture Department official says reduced prospects for Brazil's soybean harvest next spring will put further pressure on the dwindling world supply of the important oilseed.

Assistant Secretary Richard E. Bell said also in an interview that further price increases may be triggered for U.S. soybeans from the 1976 crop and may spur farmers to boost 1977 plantings even more next spring than already is indicated.

Bell's comments followed a USDA report Wednesday that showed the Brazilian soybean crop to be harvested next April and May will be about 5 per cent smaller than was estimated six weeks ago.

The report said the Brazilian harvest now is expected to produce about 462 million bushels, down about 23.8 million from the forecast in early November.

Even so, Brazil's 1977 crop will be a record and will be up substantially from this year's 412 million bushels, the previous high.

Soybean production, stimulated by high prices and rising world demand, has increased dramatically in Brazil in recent years and has made it a major U.S. competitor for the export market.

Bell said he had hoped there would be enough Brazilian soybeans next spring to help ease the tight world supply situation until the 1977 U.S. harvest is ready next fall.

"But the world is going to absorb almost all those beans that the U.S. produced in 1976 and that the Brazilians are going to produce in the early part of 1977," Bell said.

Soybeans are a source of high-protein meal used in livestock feed and vegetable oil used in food products. The beans, meal and oil have become essential to the livestock and food industry in many countries.

One of the reasons for Bell's outlook is that American farmers reduced soybean plantings last spring in favor of corn and cotton. Also, yields were poor in many areas and the 1976 harvest totaled about 1.25 billion bushels, well below the near-record of 1.52 billion produced in 1975.

With livestock feeding making a comeback, domestic and foreign soybean demand has rebounded sharply the past year or so. By the time the 1977 U.S. harvest is ready next Sept. 1, there will be only about 85 million bushels left in reserve in the U.S. supply, roughly enough to satisfy export and domestic needs for three weeks.

Board Members Appeal Removal

MT. GILEAD — (AP) — Three Northmor board of education members who were dismissed for non-feasance of office have filed a motion seeking an appeal in the 5th District Court of Appeals in Canton.

Richland County Common Pleas Court Judge David R. Arbaugh ordered Marilee Augenstein, Ivon Sipes and Elon Eash dismissed on Tuesday.

An attorney for the trio the appeals court will hold special session Jan. 3 in Morrow County court to hear the case for appeal.

Judge Arbaugh's decision was based on suit filed by petition within the school district alleging improprieties by the board members.

The charges said the board failed to advertise for bids from materials costing more than $4,000, as required by state law. The materials totaled $30,000, but the board members contended the job was broken up in such a way that cost of needed materials in one order was never higher than $4,000.

Providence Upsets Michigan Wolverines

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The pressure is off; the winning streak ended. Michigan has lost and Coach Johnny Orr is relieved.

"You hate to lose, and like being No. 1," said Orr, "but there's an awful lot of pressure. I have never been through seven games like I've gone through this year."

The seventh one proved the toughest of all. Unranked Providence, the hard-working crew with a center whose name reads like an eye chart, beat the Wolverines in the final moment of the second overtime Wednesday night.

"It was my favorite shot and I knew

I would make it," said junior pivot Bob Misevicious, whose short jump shot with one second left gave the Friars an 82-81 triumph and, as a dividend, the championship of the first Friar Classic.

"This is unquestionably the greatest moment of my college career," said Joe Hassett, who shares the Providence captaincy with fellow senior Bob Cooper. "It's especially sweet for Cooper and I because we've been here for four years. We had been in the finals of five tournaments and hadn't won once. We wanted this one badly."

So they went out and got it. Bruce

Campbell scored 25 points, Hassett 21 and Misevicious 16 in helping the Friars hand the Wolverines their first loss after six victories this season.

"This is the first time I've ever been involved, either as a player or a coach, against a No. 1 team, so you have to say it's one of my greatest thrills," said Providence Coach Dave Gavitt, whose Friars are 7-2. "Every victory is great, but maybe this has to be a little sweeter."

It was won largely on the heroics of Misevicious, who had forced the second overtime by sinking another short jump shot. That knotted the score at 74-74 with 13 seconds to go in the first extra period before a howling crowd of 12,150 at the Civic Center.

Misevicious came through again after Michigan's John Robinson was fouled and missed his first free throw in a one-and-one situation. There were 20 seconds to go and the Wolverines were ahead, 81-80.

"Campbell made the play," said Misevicious, a 6-foot-9 center who became eligible for this tournament after sitting out the school's first semester for scholastic reasons. "He penetrated and took three Michigan players with him. I was free, and went in for the shot."

The shot was heard 'round the college basketball world.

Ten other ranked teams also played Wednesday night. No. 3 San Francisco downed Arizona State 114-96 to reach the Rainbow Classic final; fifth-ranked Cincinnati topped South Carolina 79-62 to enter the final of the Sugar Bowl Classic; No. 7 Wake Forest blasted Dartmouth 84-61 in the Old Dominion Classic consolation game; No. 8 UCLA beat Utah State 88-68, and ninth-ranked North Carolina crushed Oregon 86-60 in the Far West Classic semifinal. Meanwhile, No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas subdued St. Mary's 104-81 to win the Las Vegas Classic; No. 14 Louisville held off Creighton 69-66 to take the Louisville Classic; No. 16 Maryland bested No. 18 Syracuse 96-85 for the championship of the Maryland Invitational, and No. 20 Auburn trimmed Rutgers 78-75 for third place in the Louisville Classic.

San Francisco got 22 points from Marlon Redmond and 21 from Bill Cartwright to destroy Arizona State and advance its record to 14-0.

Forward Mike Jones awoke unbeaten Cincinnati with 12 of his 14 points in the second half to pull the Bearcats from a 32-30 halftime deficit to a lopsided victory, their eighth this season.

Leroy McDonald scored nine points in a 23-4 Wake Forest spurt which closed the first half and led the 8-1 Deacons to third place in the Old Dominion Classic.

Marques Johnson amassed 31 points to power 9-1 UCLA's victory over Utah State.

North Carolina's Tar Heels got 16

points from Mike O'Koren and awesome 81 per cent shooting in the second half to breeze past Oregon and into the Far West final.

Eddie Owens contributed 21 points to the Nevada-Las Vegas triumph. The Rebels led 64-63 with 12 minutes left but went on a 10-0 tear to put the game away.

Louisville also won in double overtime as Ricky Gallon scored six of his 20 points in the second extra session.

Steve Sheppard compiled 26 points and Bill Bryant added 21 to pace Maryland's decision over Syracuse. The Orangemen got 20 points from James Williams.

Auburn got 17 points from Stan Pietkiewicz to wrap up third place in the Louisville Classic.

In other tournament action, Kansas beat Kansas State 81-64 and Missouri bested Colorado 86-77 in the semifinals of the Big Eight; Oklahoma City beat Brigham Young 78-68 and Virginia Military clipped California 73-71 in the semifinals of the All-College; Purdue drubbed Georgetown, D.C. 83-65 and Manhattan topped Penn 68-61 in the ECAC Holiday Festival; Indiana beat Georgia 74-52 in other first-round action at the Sugar Bowl; Weber State bopped St. Louis 64-57 in the other Far West semifinal; Texas topped Rhode Island 76-66 in the Friar Classic consolation game; Eastern Michigan got past South Florida 60-48 in the Las Vegas consolation; Duquesne beat Cincinnati Xavier 86-80; Old Dominion beat Mississippi 86-80 for third place in its tournament, and Columbia won the Poinsettia Classic by beating Furman 93-79.

College Grid Bowls - 8 Games In 3 Days

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

Kentucky, in its first bowl appearance since 1952 and its last for a while, hopes to make the most of it Friday against North Carolina in the Peach Bowl, the first in a string of games over the weekend that will close out the 1976 college football season.

By the time the weekend is over, there will have been eight bowl games over three days, the national championship will have been determined and the ranks of television football widows will have swelled appreciably.

But, as far as thousands of Kentucky boosters are concerned, the first game is the only one that counts.

Kentucky, coming off a dismal 2-8-1 campaign in 1975, went 7-4 this season. But Wildcat spirits were dampened recently when the NCAA slapped the University with assorted sanctions for recruiting violations. Kentucky is banned from bowl games, television and the Southeast Conference race at least through 1977.

Kentucky wants to make its Peach Bowl appearance a memorable one and the university claims it will have 37,000 Kentucky fans in the stands at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium for the 2:30 p.m. EST kickoff.

"We fully intend to take over the city," says Russell Rice, Kentucky's sports information director.

"We're coming down to Atlanta to win this game," adds Wildcat Coach Fran Curci. "It can only help our program and give our recruiting a big boost."

North Carolina, which went 9-2, is not conceding anything to Kentucky, even crowd size. "You might say the crowd, like the game, looks like a toss-up," says Tar Heel Coach Bill Dooley. "They have a slight edge, but both the game and the crowd will be close."

North Carolina, ranked 19th, got a scare Wednesday when running back Mike Voight, the Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year, sprained an ankle in practice. The injury, however, was not considered serious.

Friday night No. 9 Texas Tech and No. 13 Nebraska bring their disappointments into Houston for the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl. The Red Raiders tied for the Southwest Conference title but missed a trip to the Cotton Bowl because they lost to co-champ Houston during the regular season. The Cornhuskers were knocked out of a share of the Big Eight Conference title and an Orange Bowl trip with a season-ending loss to Oklahoma.

Saturday is the biggest day of the year for college football with eight of the top 12 teams in action. Top-ranked Pittsburgh puts its unbeaten record on the line against No. 5 Georgia in the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans. Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett keys Pitt's explosive offense against the so-called "Junkyard Dogs" of Georgia's defense.

If Pitt should stumble early in the day, there are a host of national title hopefuls ready to reach for the No. 1 spot. No. 2 Michigan, the Big Ten co-champion, goes against Pacific-8 winner Southern California, No. 3, in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif. And No. 4 Maryland, one of only three major college undefeated teams — Pitt and Rutgers are the others — could conceivably end up on top if Pitt is beaten and Michigan and Southern Cal tie.

But the Terps will have to down No. 6 Houston in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas to stay alive.

Saturday night No. 11 Ohio State, co-holders of the Big Ten title, and No. 12 Colorado, which shares the Big Eight crown, square off in the Orange Bowl in Miami.

On Sunday it will be No. 10 Texas A&M against Florida in the Sun Bowl in El Paso, Tex., and the East-West Shrine Game at Palo Alto, Calif.

Boston Routs Vancouver

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The circumstances couldn't have been better for Peter McNab. Friends and relatives were in the crowd at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum, his grandparents were watching the game on television, and he was playing in his home town.

"If I had to pick any place I would like to score three goals, it would be Vancouver," said the Bruins center, who did just that in Boston's 8-1 rout of the Canucks Wednesday night.

It didn't take long for the Bruins to get started. Jean Ratelle tipped in a shot by Bobby Schmautz just 3:45 after the opening faceoff, then Earl Anderson — recently called up from the American Hockey League — scored his fourth goal in six games just 12 seconds later.

After Finnish import Matti Hagman made it 3-1 at 2:38 of the second period, McNab added his 22nd and 23rd goals of the National Hockey League campaign and Rick Middleton scored on a breakaway as many in the crowd of 15,570 got up to leave.

"Don't knock those fans," said Bruins' Coach Don Cherry, who has heard his share of boos at Boston Garden this season. "If we lost 8-1 in Boston we'd have to have bodyguards out there."

In the other NHL games Wednesday night, Buffalo downed Atlanta 6-3; Colorado bested Washington 4-1; Montreal and Pittsburgh skated to a 3-3 tie; Chicago ripped Detroit 6-3, and Toronto topped Cleveland 6-2.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kansas City's Ron Boone is a changed man. He's piling up points when a few weeks ago his shots were bouncing off the rim. His confidence has returned after reaching a valley in a game of highs and lows.

"He's a great player and they go up and down," observed his coach, Phil Johnson. "He was in a slump a couple of weeks ago, but now I'm sure he's up to what he was before."

Wednesday night, Boone scored 31 points in the Kings' 113-103 National Basketball Association triumph over Buffalo. He collected 21 in the first half, which ended tied, but Jim Eakins collected 13 of his 17 points in the fourth quarter to insure the triumph.

"I started to worry. I couldn't figure out what I was doing wrong," said Boone. "I lost confidence in my shot, but in this league you just have to work yourself back into a groove. Shooting takes a lot of practice and playing night after night you don't always get enough."

In the other NBA games, Seattle beat the New York Nets 102-96; Detroit clipped Portland 120-111; Washington nipped Atlanta 96-92; Houston edged Philadelphia 93-91, and Phoenix defeated Boston 97-87.

VMI, Oklahoma City Clash In Basketball

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Virginia Military plays Oklahoma City University tonight in the championship game of the 41st Annual All-College Basketball Tournament being held here.

VMI relied on fine performances by two players to take a 73-71 win over California Wednesday evening in semifinal action while OCU used a scrambling, clawing defense and fine inside shooting to beat Brigham Young, 78-68, in the other semifinal game.

In Wednesday's consolation action, Baylor rolled past Tulane, 97-74, and St. Joseph's of Philadelphia beat Ohio University, 67-62.

The 3-year-old pacer Keystone Ore earned $509,625 in 1976 on 21 wins and nine seconds in 30 starts.

figures carried Muskingum to the championship in its Shrine Holiday basketball tournament with a 96-67 triumph over Fredonia State, N.Y., Wednesday night.

After a tight first half, the Muskies exploded for 56 points to sail to their sixth victory in eight games.

"We changed to a zone defense and forced them into some bad shots," Burson said, explaining the second half surge.

Guard Pete Liptrap paced Muskingum with 22 points. Dave Brunston added 14 points, 10 of them during the second period outburst.

Grove City, Pa., downed Thiel 88-63 in the consolation game as Jim Fink and Mike Donahoe tossed in 14 points apiece.

In other tournaments around the state:

—Ashland edged Baldwin Wallace 65-64 on Dick Steineman's layup with one second left to play and Oberlin got by Denison 79-64 in first roundplay of the Ashland College Holiday Tournament.

—Hiram beat Ohio Dominican 76-65 behind the 26-point performance of Ernie Pasqualone and Mount Union used a 20-2 second half outburst to help whip Penn State-Behrend in opening round action at Mount Union.

—Host Wooster and Clarion State, Pa., advanced to tonight's finals of the Mose Hole Classic. The Scots breezed past DePauw 84-68 and Clarion defeated John Carroll 91-81.

—Wisconsin-Oshkosh trimmed Lock Haven, Pa., 73-72 and Defiance notched an 87-74 verdict over MacMurray, Ill., in the first round of the Defiance Purple & Gold tourney.

Ohio teams fared well in Indiana tournaments, with Heidelberg defeating Aquinas 86-76 in the Tri-State and Urbana nipping Earlham 76-75 in the Franklin.

Ohio State won the consolation game of the Kodak Classic with a 69-55 triumph over host Rochester. The Buckeyes had the height advantage and outrebounded Rochester 69-55.

Consolation games in three other out-of-state tournaments saw Ohio squads on the short end of the scores. Ohio University fell to St. Joseph's, Pa., 67-62 in the All-College tournament at Oklahoma City; Bowling Green was victimized by Oral Roberts 83-76 in the Far West Classic at Portland, Ore., and Xavier dropped an 86-80 decision to Duquesne in the Maryland Invitational.

Toledo overwhelmed Butler 66-40 in a nontournament game after jumping off to a 25-0 lead. Dave Speicher paced the Rockets with 24 points.

Bert Jones Named 'Most Valuable'

NEW YORK (AP) — Bert Jones, named earlier as National Football League Offensive Player of the Year, completed a double award triumph today when he was chosen overwhelmingly as Most Valuable Player by The Associated Press.

The Baltimore quarterback received 41 of the 84 ballots cast by sports writers and broadcasters representing each of the NFL's 28 franchises.

Pittsburgh linebacker Jack Lambert, the Defensive Player of the Year, finished second in the MVP race with 19 votes, just ahead of Oakland and quarterback Ken Stabler, who had 16. Other players receiving strong support in the voting included Buffalo running back O.J. Simpson, and three quarterbacks, Fran Tarkenton of Minnesota, Steve Grogan of New England and Ken Anderson of Cincinnati.

Jones beat Stabler and Simpson in the Offensive Player balloting with 36 votes to 18 for the Oakland quarterback and 12 for the Buffalo running back, who won the NFL rushing title. Foreman, Grogan, Tarkenton, running backs Walter Payton of Chicago and Lydell Mitchell of Baltimore, quarterback Jim Hart of St. Louis and Oakland wide receiver Cliff Branch were included among the other top finishers.

Jones finished second only to Stabler in passing statistics this season, completing better than 60 per cent of his attempts for 3,104 yards and 24 touchdowns. He said the Colts coaches had much to do with his success.

"My ability hasn't changed much in the last five or six years," he said. "But through coaching, I've been able to progress and become the player I have. It's a great honor to me but also a great tribute to the coaching staff of the Colts."

Ted Marchibroda, coach of the Colts, said Jones was a deserving winner of the twin honors.

Jones grew up in a pro football atmosphere with his father, Dub, an outstanding receiver and later a coach for the Cleveland Browns. Bert starred at LSU and was the second player chosen in the 1973 NFL draft.

In the final game of his second season, he set an NFL record with 17 consecutive completions against the New York Jets. That performance moved him in the NFL record book alongside his father, who once scored a record six TDs in a single game. They are the only father-son combination to hold NFL marks.

Aces, Hawks In McDowell Cage Finals

Amanda-Clearcreek stopped McDowell, 29-23, and Grove City Golden Hawks rolled over St. Marys Fisher Catholic, 46-20, in the semi-finals of the McDowell Seventh Grade Invitational Basketball Tournament Wednesday night at the Spangler Memorial Tournament.

This sets up tonight's finals with McDowell facing St. Marys in the consolation game at 6:30 p.m. and Amanda-Clearcreek going against Grove City Golden Hawks in the championship tilt at 7:30 p.m.

Amanda-Clearcreek led at the end of each period, 4-3, 14-10, 19-16 and 29-23, to gain the win over McDowell.

Denny Compton led the Aces and all scorers in the game with 18 points, Randy Evans added three while Jeff Hettinger, Junior Beavers, Tony Kennedy and Eric Christopher each netted two.

David Eastman was tops for McDowell with eight markers, James Hunt hooped six, Todd Pontius hit five, Jeff Hardin added three and Jeff Hatfield had one.

Grove City was out in front of St. Marys all the way, 14-7, 16-10, 36-16 and 46-20, to gain a berth in the finals.

Mark Mathews again paced the Golden Hawks with 20 markers while Ron Gabriel and Mark Grewell both added six.

Jeff Arter, Paul Seifert, Stan Messerly and Steve Withen all had four points for St. Marys.

Providence Upsets Michigan Wolverines

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The pressure is off; the winning streak ended. Michigan has lost and Coach Johnny Orr is relieved. "You hate to lose, and like being No. 1," said Orr, "but there's an awful lot of pressure. I have never been through seven games like I've gone through this year."

The seventh one proved the toughest of all. Unranked Providence, the hard-working crew with a center whose name reads like an eye chart, beat the Wolverines in the final moment of the second overtime Wednesday night.

"It was my favorite shot and I knew

I would make it," said junior pivot Bob Misevicious, whose short jump shot with one second left gave the Friars an 82-81 triumph and, as a dividend, the championship of the first Friar Classic.

"This is unquestionably the greatest moment of my college career," said Joe Hassett, who shares the Providence captaincy with fellow senior Bob Cooper. "It's especially sweet for Cooper and I because we've been here for four years. We had been in the finals of five tournaments and hadn't won once. We wanted this one badly."

So they went out and got it. Bruce

Campbell scored 25 points, Hassett 21 and Misevicious 16 in helping the Friars hand the Wolverines their first loss after six victories this season.

"This is the first time I've ever been involved, either as a player or a coach, against a No. 1 team, so you have to say it's one of my greatest thrills," said Providence Coach Dave Gavitt, whose Friars are 7-2. "Every victory is great, but maybe this has to be a little sweeter."

It was won largely on the heroics of Misevicious, who had forced the second overtime by sinking another short jump shot. That knotted the score at 74-74 with 13 seconds to go in the first extra period before a howling crowd of 12,150 at the Civic Center.

Misevicious came through again after Michigan's John Robinson was fouled and missed his first free throw in a one-and-one situation. There were 20 seconds to go and the Wolverines were ahead, 81-80.

"Campbell made the play," said Misevicious, a 6-foot-9 center who became eligible for this tournament after sitting out the school's first semester for scholastic reasons. "He penetrated and took three Michigan players with him. I was free, and went in for the shot."

The shot was heard 'round the college basketball world.

Ten other ranked teams also played Wednesday night. No. 3 San Francisco downed Arizona State 114-96 to reach the Rainbow Classic final; fifth-ranked Cincinnati topped South Carolina 79-62 to enter the final of the Sugar Bowl Classic; No. 7 Wake Forest blasted Dartmouth 84-61 in the Old Dominion Classic consolation game; No. 8 UCLA beat Utah State 88-68, and ninth-ranked North Carolina crushed Oregon 86-60 in the Far West Classic semifinal.

Meanwhile, No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas subdued St. Mary's 104-81 to win the Las Vegas Classic; No. 14 Louisville held off Creighton 69-66 to take the Louisville Classic; No. 16 Maryland bested No. 18 Syracuse 96-85 for the championship of the Maryland Invitational, and No. 20 Auburn trimmed Rutgers 78-75 for third place in the Louisville Classic.

San Francisco got 22 points from Marlon Redmond and 21 from Bill Cartwright to destroy Arizona State and advance its record to 14-0.

Forward Mike Jones awoke unbeaten Cincinnati with 12 of his 14 points in the second half to pull the Bearcats from a 32-30 halftime deficit to a lopsided victory, their eighth this season.

Leroy McDonald scored nine points in a 23-4 Wake Forest spurt which closed the first half and led the 8-1 Deacons to third place in the Old Dominion Classic.

Marques Johnson amassed 31 points to power 9-1 UCLA's victory over Utah State.

North Carolina's Tar Heels got 16

points from Mike O'Koren and awesome 81 per cent shooting in the second half to breeze past Oregon and into the Far West final.

Eddie Owens contributed 21 points to the Nevada-Las Vegas triumph. The Rebels led 64-63 with 12 minutes left but went on a 10-0 tear to put the game away.

Louisville also won in double overtime as Ricky Gallon scored six of his 20 points in the second extra session.

Steve Sheppard compiled 26 points and Bill Bryant added 21 to pace Maryland's decision over Syracuse. The Orangemen got 20 points from James Williams.

Auburn got 17 points from Stan Pietkiewicz to wrap up third place in the Louisville Classic.

In other tournament action, Kansas

beat Kansas State 81-64 and Missouri bested Colorado 86-77 in the semifinals of the Big Eight; Oklahoma City beat Brigham Young 78-68 and Virginia Military clipped California 73-71 in the semifinals of the All-College; Purdue drubbed Georgetown, D.C. 83-65 and Manhattan topped Penn 68-61 in the ECAC Holiday Festival; Indiana beat Georgia 74-52 in other first-round action at the Sugar Bowl; Weber State bopped St. Louis 64-57 in the other Far West semifinal; Texas topped Rhode Island 76-66 in the Friar Classic consolation game; Eastern Michigan got past South Florida 60-48 in the Las Vegas consolation; Duquesne beat Cincinnati Xavier 86-80; Old Dominion beat Mississippi 86-80 for third place in its tournament, and Columbia won the Poinsettia Classic by beating Furman 93-79.

Bert Jones Named 'Most Valuable'

NEW YORK (AP) — Bert Jones, named earlier as National Football League Offensive Player of the Year, completed a double award triumph today when he was chosen overwhelmingly as Most Valuable Player by The Associated Press.

Simpson, and three quarterbacks, Fran Tarkenton of Minnesota, Steve Grogan of New England and Ken Anderson of Cincinnati.

Jones beat Stabler and Simpson in the Offensive Player balloting with 36 votes to 18 for the Oakland quarterback and 12 for the Buffalo running back, who won the NFL rushing title. Foreman, Grogan, Tarkenton, running backs Walter Payton of Chicago and Lydell Mitchell of Baltimore, quarterback Jim Hart of St. Louis and Oakland wide receiver Cliff Branch were included among the other top finishers.

Jones finished second only to Stabler in passing statistics this season, completing better than 60 per cent of his attempts for 3,104 yards and 24 touchdowns. He said the Colt coaches had much to do with his success.

"My ability hasn't changed much in the last five or six years," he said. "But through coaching, I've been able to progress and become the player I have. It's a great honor to me but also a great tribute to the coaching staff of the Colts."

Ted Marchibroda, coach of the Colts, said Jones was a deserving winner of the twin honors.

Jones grew up in a pro football atmosphere with his father, Dub, an outstanding receiver and later a coach for the Cleveland Browns. Bert starred at LSU and was the second player chosen in the 1973 NFL draft.

In the final game of his second season, he set an NFL record with 17 consecutive completions against the New York Jets. That performance moved him in the NFL record book alongside his father, who once scored a record six TDs in a single game. They are the only father-son combination to hold NFL marks.

Aces, Hawks In McDowell Cage Finals

Amanda-Clearcreek stopped McDowell, 29-23, and Grove City Golden Hawks rolled over St. Marys Fisher Catholic, 46-20, in the semi-finals of the McDowell Seventh Grade Invitational Basketball Tournament Wednesday night at the Spangler Memorial Tournament.

This sets up tonight's finals with McDowell facing St. Marys in the consolation game at 6:30 p.m. and Amanda-Clearcreek going against Grove City Golden Hawks in the championship tilt at 7:30 p.m.

Amanda-Clearcreek led at the end of each period, 4-3, 14-10, 19-16 and 29-23, to gain the win over McDowell.

Denny Compton led the Aces and all scorers in the game with 18 points. Randy Evans added three while Jeff Hettinger, Junior Beavers, Tony Kennedy and Eric Christopher each netted two.

David Eastman was tops for McDowell with eight markers, James Hunt hooped six, Todd Pontius hit five, Jeff Hardin added three and Jeff Hatfield had one.

Grove City was out in front of St. Marys all the way, 14-7, 16-10, 36-16 and 46-20, to gain a berth in the finals.

Mark Mathews again paced the Golden Hawks with 20 markers while Ron Gabriel and Mark Grewell both added six.

Jeff Arter, Paul Seifert, Stan Messerly and Steve Withen all had four points for St. Marys.

What kind of day will tomorrow be? To find out what the stars say, read the forecast given for your birth Sign.

FOR FRIDAY

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20): Pay no attention to dissenters and pessimists. Go about your activities with good will and a bit of finesse. You can have an unusually satisfactory day.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21): Planetary influences, auspicious, stimulate your ingenuity, good humor, affability and precision. Anything less than your best won't give others the picture of the REAL you.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21): Your intuition should be strong now. Just double-check to make sure you are not forgetting small details, and all should go well. Romance favored.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23): Exercise your capability to keep the good things going, to preserve order and to maintain a high degree of attainment. Straightforward action will command respect.

LEO (July 24 to Aug. 23): Excellent solar influences stimulate efforts and top-level thinking. Check possibilities for making sound investments.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23): A less stimulating day than you may wish, but you can cover a lot of ground by planning wisely and eliminating all nonessentials from your program.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23): Good planetary influences! A time to "dress up" old ideas and methods and make them more practical. Your artistry and creativity stimulated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22): Don't try to buck present trends or you may find yourself at unhappy variance with associates who could be helpful. Scrutinize all offerings carefully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21): Past achievements can be correctly appraised now - for what to do and what NOT to do in the future. Your ingenuity will show you how to capitalize on experience.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): With a little added vigor and determination, and a well-arranged schedule, you can propel yourself further toward ultimate aims. Emphasize optimism!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Capitalize on your artistic talents and handle your obligations in a productive way and you will reap fine returns. This day has many fine advantages, benefits.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Planets fairly generous, but here and there are traps to beset the off-guard individual. Be firm about going forward, but as delight in detecting flaws.

YOU BORN TODAY are amiable, industrious and so practical and methodical that you can often get ahead where the road seems completely blocked and others would turn back. You have a fine mind and seek out companionship which is intellectually stimulating; may take up a unique hobby which eventually proves remunerative. Don't anticipate trouble or negate your efforts through pessimism. Fields in which you could be especially successful: science, writing, diplomacy, statesmanship, instructor in literature or languages.

LOS ANGELES (AP) —

After months of asking ABC to move "Barney Miller" from the sanitized "family hour," producer Danny Arnold is getting his wish. The series starts tonight in its new 9 p.m. EST time slot.

Tonight's yarn is about what occurs when the gang down at the copshop consume brownies laced with hashish. The eats were given by a lady to detective Wojo, who didn't know the brownies were wired.

Question: Could this epic, with its mention of that potent marijuana derivative called hashish, ever have aired in the family hour?

"Yeah, I think so," producer Arnold said. He noted that ABC originally scheduled it for the old 8:30 p.m. "Miller" slot on Thursdays before deciding to reschedule it for the show's new time period tonight.

"There's nothing particularly controversial about it. We've done shows far more controversial than this. I just thought it was a very funny show and it's good to start the new time period with it."

Arnold is one of the Hollywood producers who last fall won a major court victory when the "family hour" was declared unlawful as an industry-wide standard — but not as an individual network standard.

Until now, his "Miller" series has appeared in the "family hour" that in September 1975 became part of the National Association of Broadcasters' TV code. The policy was adopted in response to public gripes about violence or sexually oriented programs aired early at night when kids still are watching the tube.

And he doesn't buy the suggestion that youngsters who watch TV early at night leave stuff arrives at 9 p.m. EST, or an hour earlier in the Midwest.

But, he said, "after nine o'clock, the theory always has been that they're supposed to be away from the sets, that you have a more adult audience and the censors are less apt to whack away at your scripts."

He said he grew extremely weary battling ABC censors whenever they found fault with the content of a "Miller" episode and kept telling him, "We can't put something like that on at 8 or 8:30 p.m."

So in time, he said, "I thought, 'Well, if you can't lick 'em, join 'em.'" He commenced campaigning for a 9 p.m. start time and feels the long campaign helped get the show put in that time slot.

But he thinks the shift primarily was due to ABC's effort to salvage a struggling comedy, "What's Happening," by putting it between two hit Thursday shows — "Welcome Back, Kotter" and his "Miller" series.

Maple Leafs

Defeat Barons

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — The Toronto Maple Leafs are well on their way to accomplishing the first of several objectives set for them this season by Coach Red Kelly.

They stayed right on course Wednesday night with a 6-2 victory over the Cleveland Barons, giving the third-place Maple Leafs an 11-point lead over their struggling National Hockey League Adams Division opponent.

West Florida was annexed by the United States Oct. 27, 1810.

Mail Service Gets Better, Officials Claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service says its statistics show that mail delivery is getting faster and "service to the American people improved in 1976."

In its annual report, issued Tuesday, the mail agency said it reduced the average delivery time for first-class letters to 1.53 days in the fiscal year that ended June 30. In the previous year, the average was 1.57 days.

However, the Postal Service made no mention of a General Accounting Office report last February that said the old Post Office Department once had a slightly faster average, 1.5 days in fiscal 1969.

"The Postal Service made tangible progress in improved and more reliable service to the American people," Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar said in a message in the annual report.

The postmaster general said first-class letters mailed to an address in the same local area were delivered the next day 95 per cent of the time.

In addition, letters going up to 600 miles were delivered by the second day 92 per cent of the time and letters going farther were delivered by the third day 90 per cent of the time, he said.

Bailar said this was an improvement from the previous year in all three categories.

Bailar also noted, "Despite improved service statistics, we recognize that some mistakes and delays are inevitable in a system that handles 300 million pieces of mail a day."

The GAO has said a significant cause of delays is mail sent to the wrong place by letter-sorting machines.

Bailar again urged citizens with complaints about mail service to fill out a "consumer service card," available at post offices and from letter carriers.

The cards have resulted "in such things as altering window hours, relocating street collection boxes, repairing faulty self-service vending equipment and identifying service bottlenecks," he said.

GOP Soon To Control PUCO

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Republican administration is expected to make the most out of a soon-to-be realized opportunity for control over the state's key regulatory agency, the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

When Commissioner Sally Bloomfield leaves her downtown office at 5 p.m., Feb. 1, the political balance on the three-member commission will tilt to the GOP, and Gov. James A. Rhodes will name her successor. Although rumors are plentiful, his choice is not yet known.

Already, Republicans on the commission, headed by Chairman C. Luther Heckman, are "handing out applications like water," according to one Democratic employee.

An aide to Heckman confirmed that job forms were being distributed among Republican faithful.

Meanwhile, those who owe their jobs to Mrs. Bloomfield or former Gov. John J. Gilligan face the prospect of being an "unemployed Democrat" in the new year.

Within weeks after Mrs. Bloomfield's departure, or even days, as many as 40 Democratic employees may be looking for new jobs, based on one informed estimate.

But maybe not. "I understand the last time the Republicans had control when Rhodes was in office, there was a clean sweep," says Public Information Officer Paul Richards, a Democrat. "But it's a different story now. A lot of these people have the technical expertise that will be difficult to replace, especially at these salaries."

A spokesman for Republican Heckman agreed, and noted that the commission would have its hands full processing utility cases under the state's new original cost rate law.

"All these rumors about a blood bath, I just can't believe it," the spokesman said.

But there will be some turnover. Richards and the directors of PUCO's four other major departments—utilities, transportation, administration and legal—will be ousted with little delay, it is generally conceded.

Republicans could even get a bonus, if the third commissioner, David Sweet, should decide to resign.

Speculation that Sweet will leave soon after Mrs. Bloomfield steps down is based on his record for consumer-oriented votes and the expectation that he would find himself consistently outvoted by the two Republicans. Rhodes would have to appoint a Democrat to fill Sweet's vacancy, but the governor has a proven track record for uncovering members of the rival party that are in tune with his policies.

Democrats do have a trump card. Any Rhodes PUCO appointment will have to be confirmed by the Democratic-dominated state Senate which has turned down four of Rhodes choices for other jobs in the past two years. In addition, Democrats may remember that a Republican-controlled Senate rejected Democratic commissioner Henry Eckhart in 1974.

Democratic lawmakers could strip some authority from a Republican commission. Rep. Arthur Wilkowski, D-46 Toledo, says he will introduce a bill to take away PUCO's regulatory responsibility for railroads.

Ironically, the PUCO was created in the 1860s as a rail commission.

Mail Service

Gets Better, Officials Claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service says its statistics show that mail delivery is getting faster and "service to the American people improved in 1976."

In its annual report, issued Tuesday, the mail agency said it reduced the average delivery time for first-class letters to 1.53 days in the fiscal year that ended June 30. In the previous year, the average was 1.57 days.

However, the Postal Service made no mention of a General Accounting Office report last February that said the old Post Office Department once had a slightly faster average, 1.5 days in fiscal 1969.

"The Postal Service made tangible progress in improved and more reliable service to the American people," Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar said in a message in the annual report.

The postmaster general said first-class letters mailed to an address in the same local area were delivered the next day 95 per cent of the time.

In addition, letters going up to 600 miles were delivered by the second day 92 per cent of the time and letters going farther were delivered by the third day 90 per cent of the time, he said.

Bailar said this was an improvement from the previous year in all three categories.

Bailar also noted, "Despite improved service statistics, we recognize that some mistakes and delays are inevitable in a system that handles 300 million pieces of mail a day."

The GAO has said a significant cause of delays is mail sent to the wrong place by letter-sorting machines.

Bailar again urged citizens with complaints about mail service to fill out a "consumer service card," available at post offices and from letter carriers.

The cards have resulted "in such things as altering window hours, relocating street collection boxes, repairing faulty self-service vending equipment and identifying service bottlenecks," he said.

GOP Soon To Control PUCO

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Republican administration is expected to make the most out of a soon-to-be realized opportunity for control over the state's key regulatory agency, the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

When Commissioner Sally Bloomfield leaves her downtown office at 5 p.m., Feb. 1, the political balance on the three-member commission will tilt to the GOP, and Gov. James A. Rhodes will name her successor. Although rumors are plentiful, his choice is not yet known.

Already, Republicans on the commission, headed by Chairman C. Luther Heckman, are "handing out applications like water," according to one Democratic employee.

An aide to Heckman confirmed that job forms were being distributed among Republican faithful.

Meanwhile, those who owe their jobs to Mrs. Bloomfield or former Gov. John J. Gilligan face the prospect of being an "unemployed Democrat" in the new year.

Within weeks after Mrs. Bloomfield's departure, or even days, as many as 40 Democratic employees may be looking for new jobs, based on one informed estimate.

But maybe not. "I understand the last time the Republicans had control when Rhodes was in office, there was a clean sweep," says Public Information Officer Paul Richards, a Democrat. "But it's a different story now. A lot of these people have the technical expertise that will be difficult to replace, especially at these salaries."

A spokesman for Republican Heckman agreed, and noted that the commission would have its hands full processing utility cases under the state's new original cost rate law.

"All these rumors about a blood bath, I just can't believe it," the spokesman said.

But there will be some turnover. Richards and the directors of PUCO's four other major departments—utilities, transportation, administration and legal—will be ousted with little delay, it is generally conceded.

Republicans could even get a bonus, if the third commissioner, David Sweet, should decide to resign.

Speculation that Sweet will leave soon after Mrs. Bloomfield steps down is based on his record for consumer-oriented votes and the expectation that he would find himself consistently outvoted by the two Republicans. Rhodes would have to appoint a Democrat to fill Sweet's vacancy, but the governor has a proven track record for uncovering members of the rival party that are in tune with his policies.

Democrats do have a trump card. Any Rhodes PUCO appointment will have to be confirmed by the Democratic-dominated state Senate which has turned down four of Rhodes choices for other jobs in the past two years. In addition, Democrats may remember that a Republican-controlled Senate rejected Democratic commissioner Henry Eckhart in 1974.

Democratic lawmakers could strip some authority from a Republican commission. Rep. Arthur Wilkowski, D-46 Toledo, says he will introduce a bill to take away PUCO's regulatory responsibility for railroads.

Ironically, the PUCO was created in the 1860s as a rail commission.

Long Holdout Ends In Gunman's Death

HAYSVILLE, Kan. (AP) — Undersheriff Sam Davidson said it was "the choice of one life or eight" that made him order sharpshooters to kill a former mental patient who threatened seven hostages with death in a home in this Wichita suburb.

Larry Leer, 30, was killed Wednesday night by two shots in the chest eight hours after he took Bonnie Horinek and her four children captive and held them with a pistol, rifle and six other weapons he gathered in their home. As the drama progressed, the Horineks were released and he took seven others hostages.

Leer's initial demand was to see his former girlfriend, Lonnie Beam, Mrs. Horinek's sister. But after she arrived, the demands grew to include cigarettes, protection upon surrender, protection from bankruptcy, and commitment at a mental hospital of his choice.

As police and sheriff's deputies gathered outside the dwelling, Leer told his hostages: "They (the officers) have signed our death warrants."

Two hours before the shooting, an Associated Press reporter telephoned Leer, who identified himself by saying, "You're talking to the man holding the gun."

He told the reporter he refused to end his life in a gutter somewhere, adding: "A man has to have something to live for and without the things that he lives for he must die. These things I must live for or I must die."

Before Leer could elaborate, his attorney, Warner Eisenbise of Wichita, who was one of the hostages, cut into the conversation.

Another hostage, Sedgwick County Sheriff Johnnie Darr, said, "When I went into the house, all the people were in control. They were very calm and very cool."

"If any one of them had made a bad move while Mrs. Horinek and her four kids were there, I'm afraid we'd have all been shot."

Other hostages — who came to the home at various times at Leer's request or in exchange for the Horinek family — were Miss Beam, Police Lt. Harry Minor, Police Det. Bernie Drowatski, Police Chaplain The Rev. Byron D. Tracy and Charles W. Pickared, identified as a counselor.

Authorities said Leer had come to the Horinek home to see Miss Beam, who wasn't there. An argument developed, and Leer grabbed a pistol, pointed it at the head of John Horinek, Bonnie's husband, and threatened to kill him, officers said.

Horinek ran from the house, called police, and Haysville officer George Jameson, 32, was grazed on the head when Leer fired the pistol as he responded to the call.

Food Stamp Payments In Error

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government paid out almost $215 million in food stamps to people who were ineligible for the aid they got during the first six months of 1976, the Agriculture Department says.

The report, released Monday, indicated that about nine cents of each dollar spent on the food stamp program is paid erroneously. The program costs taxpayers about $5.7 billion annually, with $5.3 billion paying for food and $400 million paying for the administration of the program.

The department's Food and Nutrition Section said that its survey found that 745,000 of the nation's 18.5 million food stamp users were ineligible. Another 1.8 million people got too many stamps for their income level.

The payments to the ineligible group amounted to $109.3 million. The overpayments to those who were eligible for some assistance amounted to $105.4 million.

The figures represented a reduction in the waste and error rate for the last half of 1975, and USDA Food Stamp Director Nancy Snyder found that encouraging.

"These statistics mean that the states are doing a better job of reviewing their case loads, finding the difficulties, and correcting them," she said.

During the last half of 1975, errors cost $225 million, compared with $215 million in the first half of 1976. The percentage of ineligible recipients was 8.9 per cent instead of 7.6 per cent. And the percentage receiving overpayments was 19.4 per cent instead of this year's 18 per cent.

At the same time, the percentage of recipients who did not receive enough stamps rose from 6.5 per cent to 7.1 per cent, indicating that the states, which administer the eligibility laws, were tending to err on the side of frugality rather than liberality.

Decline In Farms Continues Slowly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long-time decline in the number of U.S. farms is continuing but at a much slower pace than a decade ago according to the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Wednesday that preliminary figures indicate there will be about 2,752,000 farms in operation on Jan. 1, 1977, some 26,000 fewer than at the start of 1976.

That represents a decline of less than 1 per cent during the year. A decade ago farm numbers dropped 95,000 from 3,257,000 on Jan. 1, 1966 to 3,162,000 on Jan. 1, 1967, a decline of 2.9 per cent.

The report said over-all farm numbers have dropped about 15 per cent in the past decade, but that the amount of land in farms declined only about 4 per cent.

Consequently, the report said, the average size of farms has increased from 348 acres each in 1966 to 393 acres estimated for 1977. It was 390 acres last Jan. 1.

Total land in farms on Jan. 1 is expected to be 1,081 million acres, a decline of about 2.7 million acres from last Jan. 1. A decade ago nearly 1,132 million acres were in farms.

Urban growth, highways, recreation and other non-farm usages have caused the shrinkage.

While USDA experts say there is no chance that the country will run out of farmland in the foreseeable future, they are concerned that much prime land used for crops in some areas is being taken over for other purposes.

Texas continued as the leader in the number of farms estimated as of Jan. 1, 1977, with 202,000 units, compared with 205,000 a year ago.

Other leading states included Missouri, 137,000 on Jan. 1, 1977, and 138,000 a year ago; Iowa 131,000 and 133,000; Kentucky 124,000 unchanged, and Tennessee 123,000 and 124,000.

Alaska, as usual, was reported with the fewest farms — 300 units, unchanged from recent years.

Purse Snatching Checked By Police

The Circleville Police Department investigated a reported purse snatching at Berger Hospital Wednesday evening at approximately 8:45.

According to the report, employees at the hospital discovered a male subject in the area of the nurse's lounge in the maternity wing, and they asked the subject what he was doing in the area.

He replied that he was waiting on a Mrs. Smith who was in the maternity ward. A search of the area failed to reveal a Mrs. Smith, and at this point the subject grabbed a purse that belonged to Mrs. Carol Ottinger, 174 Brook Hill Lane, a nurse in the maternity wing of the hospital.

The subject ran out of the hospital and left the area. Persons in the hospital told Ptl. Howard Fletcher that the man had been observed earlier looking through the window into the nurse's lounge and he had also been seen in the rear of the emergency room.

The purse contained cash, credit cards, a hospital payroll check, car registration and keys, along with various other items.

Gasoline Controls May Be Removed

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — President Ford is preparing to end government controls on the price of gasoline, a move already drawing criticism from a Democratic Congress that has the power to block the plan.

Ford aide John Carlson said freeing oil companies of price controls would have little effect on the cost of fuel at the service station pump, but opponents of decontrol have claimed that such a move could increase prices by as much as six cents per gallon.

The Federal Energy Administration said decontrol could hike unleaded gasoline by two cents per gallon, raising the price of all gasoline sold in the United States by about $130 million a day.

Carlson said the presidential order would be the last step in a program aimed at lifting price controls on energy products by the end of his administration. Gasoline is the only major oil product still under federal controls at the retail level.

Carlson said Ford probably will issue the order by Jan. 4, the day

Congress reconvenes. Congress then would decide whether to override the order before President-elect Carter's inauguration on Jan. 20.

Carlson quoted Ford as saying he thinks it will be a "close call" to win approval of the plan in what could shape up as his final struggle with Congress.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., quickly vowed to fight Ford's proposal, calling it "a belated Christmas gift to the oil industry." Udall said the move would be unfair to consumers as well as inflationary.

Ford also said he expects to decide within a week whether to reconsider granting amnesty to Vietnam draft evaders and deserters.

He said he ordered a review of the amnesty question after receiving a request for a blanket amnesty from Jane Hart, the widow of Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich., who died Sunday.

He said the review would take into consideration how a new program would affect military moral and how it would be received by the public. He also said he wants to determine whether granting the request would be fair to those who participated in his earlier program.

Court Of Appeals Reverses 1970 Reynold's Case

The Court of Appeals of the Fourth Appellate District reversed the decision of a 1970 case related to the construction of a roof on the Reynolds Metals Plant in Ashville.

In an opinion by Earl Stephenson the decision against Reynolds Metals was reversed. The 1970 decision in Pickaway County Common Pleas Court awarded Brown and Kerr, Inc. of Findlay and the Lathrop Company of Toledo damages from the Reynolds Company. On Dec. 10, that decision was reversed in the court of appeals.

Post trial motions filed by the Reynolds Metals Company noted six errors. The two errors were sustained by the court of appeals is not admitting into evidence four exhibits containing statements made by employees of Lathrop and the court's refusal to permit testimony about the repairs of the roof after the defense witness stated complete removal of the roof was required.

The original case was brought to the courts because Reynolds refused to pay Lathrop the final amount due on the contract of $247,000. Lathrop in turn refused payment to its subcontractor Brown and Kerr Inc. of $87,000.

Appeal Decision On Annexation

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — Warren County Commissioners have decided to appeal a court decision which would permit annexation of a 19-acre tract of land to the city of Middletown.

Commissioners decided Tuesday to appeal to the 1st Ohio District Court of Appeals a decision by Judge Lieudell Bauer in Warren County Common Pleas Court.

Judge Bauer had ordered annexation to proceed, stating the general good of the territory to be annexed would be served.

Commissioners have 30 days in which to file an appeal.

Mottl Urges Curbs On Steel Imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Ronald Mottl, D-Ohio, urged President-elect Jimmy Carter by letter Wednesday to establish controls on U.S. steel imports from Japan.

Cautioning Carter that the effect of imports on Cleveland and other U.S. steel areas could become drastic, Mottl argued that excessive imports from Japan already have cut sharply into demand for U.S.-produced steel.

Mottl asked Carter either to limit import quotas or to seek an international agreement prohibiting large imports from the United States.

Wouldn't it be great to have a telephone auction every day of the week? Then dealers and packers in Ohio would have to increase the price they pay to farmers every day, instead of just on Mondays. Some hog packers are offering to pay a small amount over the price established by the Tele-Auction.

BUT could they afford to do this every day? What kind of price would they pay if they were not competing with our Tele-Auction? Tele-Auction prices are established when 17 buyers from 5 states bid by a conference telephone call.

Tele-Auction service charges are a bare minimum and probably less than buyers save in their daily purchases except when forced by competition through your farmer-owned marketing organization to raise their price.

Long Holdout Ends In Gunman's Death

HAYSVILLE, Kan. (AP) — Undersheriff Sam Davidson said it was "the choice of one life or eight" that made him order sharpshooters to kill a former mental patient who threatened seven hostages with death in a home in this Wichita suburb.

Larry Leer, 30, was killed Wednesday night by two shots in the chest eight hours after he took Bonnie Horinek and her four children captive and held them with a pistol, rifle and six other weapons he gathered in their home. As the drama progressed, the Horineks were released and he took seven others hostages.

Leer's initial demand was to see his former girlfriend, Lonnie Beam, Mrs. Horinek's sister. But after she arrived, the demands grew to include cigarettes, protection upon surrender, protection from bankruptcy, and commitment at a mental hospital of his choice.

As police and sheriff's deputies gathered outside the dwelling, Leer told his hostages: "They (the officers) have signed our death warrants."

Two hours before the shooting, an Associated Press reporter telephoned Leer, who identified himself by saying, "You're talking to the man holding the gun."

He told the reporter he refused to end his life in a gutter somewhere, adding: "A man has to have something to live for and without the things that he lives for he must die. These things I must live for or I must die."

Before Leer could elaborate, his attorney, Warner Eisenbise of Wichita, who was one of the hostages, cut into the conversation.

Another hostage, Sedgwick County Sheriff Johnnie Darr, said, "When I went into the house, all the people were in control. They were very calm and very cool."

"If any one of them had made a bad move while Mrs. Horinek and her four kids were there, I'm afraid we'd have all been shot."

Other hostages — who came to the home at various times at Leer's request or in exchange for the Horinek family — were Miss Beam, Police Lt. Harry Minor, Police Det. Bernie Drowatzki, Police Chaplain The Rev. Byron D. Tracy and Charles W. Pickard, identified as a counselor.

Authorities said Leer had come to the Horinek home to see Miss Beam, who wasn't there. An argument developed, and Leer grabbed a pistol, pointed it at the head of John Horinek, Bonnie's husband, and threatened to kill him, officers said.

Horinek ran from the house, called police, and Haysville officer George Jameson, 32, was grazed on the head when Leer fired the pistol as he responded to the call.

Gasoline Controls May Be Removed

VALE, Colo. (AP) — President Ford is preparing to end government controls on the price of gasoline, a move already drawing criticism from a Democratic Congress that has the power to block the plan.

Ford aide John Carlson said freeing oil companies of price controls would have little effect on the cost of fuel at the service station pump, but opponents of decontrol have claimed that such a move could increase prices by as much as six cents per gallon.

The Federal Energy Administration said decontrol could hike unleaded gasoline by two cents per gallon, raising the price of all gasoline sold in the United States by about $130 million a day.

Carlson said the presidential order would be the last step in a program aimed at lifting price controls on energy products by the end of his administration. Gasoline is the only major oil product still under federal controls at the retail level.

Carlson said Ford probably will issue the order by Jan. 4, the day Congress reconvenes. Congress then would decide whether to override the order before President-elect Carter's inauguration on Jan. 20.

Carlson quoted Ford as saying he thinks it will be a "close call" to win approval of the plan in what could shape up as his final struggle with Congress.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., quickly vowed to fight Ford's proposal, calling it "a belated Christmas gift to the oil industry." Udall said the move would be unfair to consumers as well as inflationary.

Ford also said he expects to decide within a week whether to reconsider granting amnesty to Vietnam draft evaders and deserters.

He said he ordered a review of the amnesty question after receiving a request for a blanket amnesty from Jane Hart, the widow of Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich., who died Sunday.

He said the review would take into consideration how a new program would affect military moral and how it would be received by the public. He also said he wants to determine whether granting the request would be fair to those who participated in his earlier program.

Court Of Appeals Reverses 1970 Reynold's Case

Antiwar Activists Appeal To Viet Reds

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Acting "more in sorrow than in anger," a group of prominent antiwar activists, including folksinger Joan Baez, has appealed to the Communist government of Vietnam to halt its "grievous and systematic violations of human rights."

The group of more than 90 persons who were active in the antiwar movement of the late 1960s and early 1970s submitted its plea in a petition to Vietnam's permanent observer at the United Nations.

The signers said at a news conference Wednesday they had "no choice but to go public" with the appeal after months of futile efforts to deliver the petition privately to Vietnamese authorities.

Signatures on the petition included Miss Baez, New York City Council President Paul O'Dwyer, Episcopal priest Malcolm Boyd, poet Allen Ginsberg, Roman Catholic Bishop Carroll Dozier of Memphis, Tenn., and Rabbi Arnold Wolf of Yale University.

Organizers of the appeal said several other prominent signers, including Catholic activists Daniel and Philip Berrigan and Daniel Ellsberg, asked that their names not be used in a formal public statement because they believed it might work against their interest in improving conditions within Vietnam.

The petition cited reports of the detention of 20,000 to 30,000 Vietnamese in "re-education centers" since the fall of Saigon to Communist forces in April 1975. It also referred to reports of religious repression and other human rights violations "too specific and persuasive for us to ignore."

The statement told Hanoi: "The actions of your government constitute a great disappointment to all those who expected not the 'bloodbath' so eagerly predicted by the American White House but rather an example of reconciliation built on tolerance...."

"We voice our protest in the hope that your government can avoid repetition of the tragic historical pattern in which liberators gain power only to impose a new oppression."

Food Stamp Payments In Error

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government paid out almost $215 million in food stamps to people who were ineligible for the aid they got during the first six months of 1976, the Agriculture Department says.

The report, released Monday, indicated that about nine cents of each dollar spent on the food stamp program is paid erroneously. The program costs taxpayers about $5.7 billion annually, with $5.3 billion paying for food and $400 million paying for the administration of the program.

The department's Food and Nutrition Section said that its survey found that 745,000 of the nation's 18.5 million food stamp users were ineligible. Another 1.8 million people got too many stamps for their income level.

The payments to the ineligible group amounted to $109.3 million. The overpayments to those who were eligible for some assistance amounted to $105.4 million.

The figures represented a reduction in the waste and error rate for the last half of 1975, and USDA Food Stamp Director Nancy Snyder found that encouraging.

"These statistics mean that the states are doing a better job of reviewing their case loads, finding the difficulties, and correcting them," she said.

During the last half of 1975, errors cost $225 million, compared with $215 million in the first half of 1976. The percentage of ineligible recipients was 8.9 per cent instead of 7.6 per cent. And the percentage receiving overpayments was 19.4 per cent instead of this year's 18 per cent.

At the same time, the percentage of recipients who did not receive enough stamps rose from 6.5 per cent to 7.1 per cent, indicating that the states, which administer the eligibility laws, were tending to err on the side of frugality rather than liberality.

Decline In Farms Continues Slowly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long-time decline in the number of U.S. farms is continuing but at a much slower pace than a decade ago according to the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Wednesday that preliminary figures indicate there will be about 2,752,000 farms in operation on Jan. 1, 1977, some 26,000 fewer than at the start of 1976.

That represents a decline of less than 1 per cent during the year. A decade ago farm numbers dropped 95,000 from 3,257,000 on Jan. 1, 1966 to 3,162,000 on Jan. 1, 1976, a decline of 2.9 per cent.

The report said over-all farm numbers have dropped about 15 per cent in the past decade, but that the amount of land in farms declined only about 4 per cent.

Consequently, the report said, the average size of farms has increased from 348 acres each in 1966 to 393 acres estimated for 1977. It was 390 acres last Jan. 1.

Total land in farms on Jan. 1 is expected to be 1,081 million acres, a decline of about 2.7 million acres from last Jan. 1. A decade ago nearly 1,132 million acres were in farms.

Urban growth, highways, recreation and other non-farm usages have caused the shrinkage.

While USDA experts say there is no chance that the country will run out of farmland in the foreseeable future, they are concerned that much prime land used for crops in some areas is being taken over for other purposes.

Texas continued as the leader in the number of farms estimated as of Jan. 1, 1977, with 202,000 units, compared with 205,000 a year ago.

Other leading states included Missouri, 137,000 on Jan. 1, 1977, and 138,000 a year ago; Iowa 131,000 and 133,000; Kentucky 124,000 unchanged, and Tennessee 123,000 and 124,000.

Alaska, as usual, was reported with the fewest farms — 300 units, unchanged from recent years.

Purse Snatching Checked By Police

The Circleville Police Department investigated a reported purse snatching at Berger Hospital Wednesday evening at approximately 8:45.

According to the report, employees at the hospital discovered a male subject in the area of the nurse's lounge in the maternity wing, and they asked the subject what he was doing in the area.

He replied that he was waiting on a Mrs. Smith who was in the maternity ward. A search of the area failed to reveal a Mrs. Smith, and at this point the subject grabbed a purse that belonged to Mrs. Carol Ottinger, 174 Brook Hill Lane, a nurse in the maternity wing of the hospital.

The subject ran out of the hospital and left the area. Persons in the hospital told Ptl. Howard Fletcher that the man had been observed earlier looking through the window into the nurse's lounge and he had also been seen in the rear of the emergency room.

The purse contained cash, credit cards, a hospital payroll check, car registration and keys, along with various other items.
